

AP LATIN: PLINY & VERGIL

Märk J. Crowley

Table of Contents:

Page(s)	Content
3-7	Background on Pliny & his Letters
7	Names to know in Pliny's Letters
8-12	Pliny, Letters 6.16
13-17	Pliny, Letters 6.20
18-21	Pliny, Letters 7.27
22	Pliny, Letters 10.37
23	Pliny, Letters 10.90
24	Pliny, Letters 10.5
25	Pliny, Letters 10.6
26	Pliny, Letters 10.7
27	Pliny, Letters 6.4
28	Pliny, Letters 6.7
29-31	Names & terms to know in Vergil's Aeneid
32-36	syllabus readings from Book One of Vergil's Aeneid
37-41	syllabus readings from Book Two of Vergil's Aeneid
42-43	non-syllabus reading #1 from Book Two of Vergil's Aeneid
44-47	non-syllabus reading #2 from Book Two of Vergil's Aeneid
48-54	syllabus readings from Book Four of Vergil's Aeneid
55-58	syllabus readings from Book Six of Vergil's Aeneid
59-61	syllabus readings from Book Seven of Vergil's Aeneid
62-65	syllabus readings from Book Eleven of Vergil's Aeneid
66-70	syllabus readings from Book Twelve of Vergil's Aeneid
73-79	summaries of APLAT syllabus readings
80	how to scan Latin poetry
81-82	stylistic devices in Latin
83-94	review of Latin grammar
95-107	Latin case uses
108-112	Subjunctive clauses

Gaius Plinius Secundus (a.k.a. Pliny the Younger)

Pliny's Youth

- Born Gaius Caecilius Secundus in 62 CE to an equestrian father (Lucius Caecilius) and mother (Plinia of Como)
- Adopted by his maternal uncle (Pliny the Elder) when his father died & took his uncle's name (Gaius Plinius Caecilius Secundus)
 - o Pliny the Elder had been a cavalry officer on the Rhine
 - o Left military/political career in Nero's court as the situation deteriorated
 - o Galba hated the Rhine army for putting down Vindex' rebellion
 - o Pursued scholarly works (military works, biographies, Problems in Grammar, and the 37-volume mega-work Natural History)
 - o Ascension of Vespasian was a positive change because Pliny the Elder was friends with Vespasian's son Titus (the future emperor).
 - o Pliny the Elder was made procurator in 70 CE & served in Gaul, Africa, & Spain from 70-76 CE
- While his uncle was away, Pliny the Younger was raised by Verginius Rufus
 - o Verginius Rufus founded a literary salon & attracted the educated elite to his circle
 - o The famous orator Nicetes of Smyrna became Pliny's Greek rhetoric teacher
 - o The famous author/orator Quintilian became his Latin rhetoric teacher
 - "Rhetoric" at this point was not just the art of argumentation & persuasive public speaking. It was a comprehensive system of general knowledge and manners that a gentleman was expected to have at his disposal.
 - o He quite literally could not have had better teachers during this critical time, which contributes greatly to both his literary style and career success later in life
- Pliny published his first work in 75 or 76 CE (a tragedy in Greek) as a teenager.
- His uncle died in the eruption of Mt. Vesuvius when Pliny was 17 years old (August 25th, 79 CE)
 - o Pliny the Elder was the admiral of the Roman navy at Misenum on the Bay of Naples. He led a heroic expedition to rescue survivors and do scientific research during the eruption. He did not survive the expedition.

Pliny's Early Public Career

- Upon the death of his uncle, Pliny the Younger adopted his uncle's properties, possessions, and responsibilities of his uncle. Thus, he embarked on his public career. His career was greatly aided by his family connections and outstanding early education.
 - o Career offices he mentions on an inscription: magistrate on a board of ten, tribune of the 3rd Gallic legion, commissioner of the Roman Equites, quaestor of the emperor, tribune of the people, praetor, prefect of the military treasury, prefect of the treasury of Saturn, curator of the Tiber River & Roman sewers, legatus Augusti prō praetōre consulārī potestāte for the province of Pontus, augur, & consul

- Like most ambitious young men from wealthy families, he served in all branches of the government rather than specialize in one field.
- In 90 CE, at the age of 28, Pliny became a senator when he was named quaestor, which raised him above both his father and uncle in social status.
- Pliny was supported by the emperor Domitian, who succeeded his older brother, Titus.
 - Pliny must have been successful as a quaestor and tribune, because Domitian named him praetor without the normal year's interval between offices.
 - Pliny struggled working under Domitian (a petty, unstable, unqualified megalomaniac who insisted on being addressed as dominus et deus, eventually given the ultimate penalty of damnatio memoriae after his death)
 - Many of Pliny's friends and peers either left imperial service or worked against the emperor. Several were banished or executed.
 - "I stood amidst the flames of thunderbolts dropping all round me, and there were certain clear indications to make me suppose a like end was awaiting me"
 - Pliny continued working for Domitian as prefect of the military (managing military payroll) even as he got more erratic, paranoid, and isolated until he was killed in a successful conspiracy and succeeded by Nerva.
- In 97 CE, Pliny led the prosecution of Publicius Certus, who had prosecuted and executed Pliny's friend Helvidius Priscus.
 - "This was a truly splendid opportunity for attacking the guilty, avenging the injured, and making one-self known."
 - Publicius was found dead shortly after the successful lawsuit. Nerva appointed Pliny to take his place as prefect of the treasury (managing the empire's finances).
 - Pliny clearly was a very talented and successful accountant to get such a promotion. He also proved himself right in using the lawsuit as an opportunity for self-advancement.
- Pliny also grew seriously ill in 97 CE, and his second wife died. We do not know the names of either of his wives.
- In 97 CE, the generals of the Rhine & Danube armies gathered together in a silent coup to agree upon the next emperor. Nerva agreed to adopt their chosen leader, Trajan, as his successor before he died four months later.
 - Trajan kept Pliny on as treasury prefect and promised to make him consul.
- In 99 or 100 CE, Pliny and his friend Tacitus (the famous historian) prosecuted the former governor of Africa, Marius Priscus.
- In 100 CE, at the age of 38, Pliny served as consul alongside Gaius Julius Cornutus Tertullus. The son of an equestrian had reached the highest office in the Roman Empire (other than emperor) at a young age.
- Realizing that he now had neither wife nor children, Pliny embarked on a project that would ensure his name would live on after his death.
 - He published a panegyric eulogy on the reign of Trajan.
 - He published a book of poetry.
 - He published three books of his correspondences.

Pliny's Letters

- These are not all of his letters, but a carefully-selected group of examples to show the breadth of his correspondences. His letters serve as a monument to a successful, well-connected career.
 - o They are letters to & from important people about important issues. They show the closeness of his relationships and the power of his position.
 - o The letters, often containing advice, were to family and friends and frequently contained a strong, moral message as well as comments on social and domestic affairs as well as contemporary judicial and political events, especially as they related to the much-hated Emperor Domitian.
- They also serve as models for the genre that others could emulate in style and structure.
 - o They were carefully composed and written in a detailed, formal style.
- The fact that Pliny purposefully chose which letters to include and edited/polished them before publication makes the issue of their authenticity intriguing.
- Pliny's character in his letters
 - o Reading the letters, we get the impression that Pliny was a cultured and humane man. For example, he tells how he sent one of his freedmen, who suffered from tuberculosis, on a cruise to Egypt; and when the dry air of the desert did not cure the patient, he sent him to a chalet in the Alps. He speaks out against the cruelty of masters towards their slaves.
 - o Does the fact that he personally published his letters makes his readers reconsider this? He clearly wanted us to think about him in a positive light.
 - o There is something fundamentally insincere about the letters (and, by extension, the author). He could be friendly and kind to anyone, but it seems that his amicability was some sort of façade, a mask. This comes as no surprise. Pliny was able to survive Domitian's tyranny and must have developed a functional dishonesty. It was a necessary survival strategy.
- Pliny's correspondence became popular, and after the first three books, he published six additional volumes. He was pleased when Tacitus told him that he had been visiting the horse races and had been mistaken for "that famous author Pliny". Of course, the author of the Letters was flattered, but he was also proud to be mentioned in one and the same breath with his friend.

Pliny's Later Public Career

- The now-successful author married again. Calpurnia was the love of his life. He was forty, and she fourteen, but this difference was no obstacle to a happy marriage.
 - o Pliny published several love letters, which are very interesting - not because of their contents, but because they some of the first letters like these.
- The emperor Trajan took note of Pliny for his success in literature and prosecuting corrupt ex-governors of Baetica, Africa, & Bithynia.
- Trajan made Pliny an augur (a ceremonial, religious office) the curator of the Tiber River & Cloaca Maxima in Rome.
 - o Trajan undertook major projects in waste management and water control (aqueducts & canals) as well as establishing new harbors at Ostia and Centumcellae.
- As Pliny got involved with the prosecution of another former governor of Bithynia, it became clear that there was a serious financial crisis in Bithynia that required imperial intervention.

- Trajan needed a new governor of Bithynia, and Pliny was the obvious candidate. He was a good speaker, had a gift for dealing with people, had a practical nature, and understood public finances.
- Pliny has special consular authority to deal with a senatorial (not an imperial) province. He was given financial control of public works, which was unusual.
- The financial problems in Bithynia were very complex, and Pliny's most important responsibility was to ensure that the tax system would not collapse. This was every governor's first job, and his other tasks were derived from this first duty: commanding the provincial troops, inspecting financial documents, the administration of justice.
 - Pliny's education in Greek made him uniquely suited for this.
 - His literary fame made him popular and well-respected.
 - His special commission as legatus Augusti prō praetōre consulārī potestāte also made it clear that any decision of his was effectively an order from the emperor.
- As governor of Bithynia, Pliny did everything he could to stress the power of his office, to emphasize his close connection with the emperor, to appear fair/kind/just to the provincials, and to build relationships with the local elites.
- Pliny's mission in Bithynia was difficult. Much depended on his greatest talent: his tact. During the reign of Domitian, he had been able to cope with a tyrannical emperor and to maintain contacts with the opposition. He was able to give everybody a feeling to be liked. This was absolutely necessary to be successful in Bithynia. At the same time, Pliny could show that he was firmly in charge and that he was not diminishing the privileges of the local elite.
- Pliny held this office for at least 18 months (based on his last datable letter).
- Pliny's tasks in Bithynia:
 - He put all towns under legal constraint. If they wanted to spend large sums of money, they had to ask permission. From now on, every large expenditure had to be reported to Pliny; if he accepted the request, he would forward it to the emperor, who made the final decision.
 - Pliny not only inspected the expenditures, but also the incomes of the towns. In several letters, he refers to the recovery of overdue debts. Most of his measures were meant to reorganize public finances.
 - He proposed building two canals to connect waterways (two lakes & two rivers) to aid irrigation & transportation. One of these canals was still operating in the 19th Century.
 - He looked into the construction of aqueducts, theaters, & public baths.
 - After a year in Bithynia, he reported a budget surplus.
- The Christian problem
 - Many of the letters, however, were concerned with the growing Christian population. Pliny believed the Christian "fraternities" were perverse as well as "depraved and immoderate" superstitions. Pliny was unsure and sought the emperor's advice on how to deal with what he saw as a major problem.
 - At the time Pliny was conducting both trials and executions of suspected Christians. Pliny wrote that he always gave supposed Christians the opportunity to recant; if not, they would be executed. In one instance he had two suspected Christian women slaves questioned and then tortured and wanted Trajan's opinion on the matter. Trajan replied that Christians should not be sought out, but if found they should be tried, and if found guilty, they should be executed. However, if they were Roman citizens, they must be sent to Rome for trial.

- The crisis in the Bithynian finances had been averted, and after a year and a half, Pliny returned to Italy. He had been a successful governor: the finances had been reorganized and the local elite had learned its lesson. The correspondence he had exchanged with Trajan was published as a tenth book of his Letters.
- Many historians think Pliny died in office as governor of Bithynia in 111 or 112 CE.
- Pliny did not occupy other offices. He was more than fifty years old. We do not know anything about his old age, except for the fact that he made his will. He left a large amount of money to his native town Como, to build baths. 300,000 sesterces were used to decorate them, and 200,000 sesterces were set apart - the interest served for the upkeep of the baths. He also released a hundred of his slaves and established a fund to support them after his death.
- To the modern historian, Pliny is a very important person. Not because he did something special, but on the contrary, because he is typical of the senatorial class during the height of the Roman Empire.
 - He served and survived under good & bad emperors of three different dynasties.

Names to know in Pliny's Letters:

- Calpurnia - 3rd wife of Pliny the Younger, poor health
- Domitian - Roman emperor; last emperor of the Flavian Dynasty; megalomaniac who insisted on being addressed as "dominus et deus;" paranoid about conspiracies; murdered by conspirators that included his own bodyguard, officials, & wife; suffered damnatio memoriae after his death
- Pliny the Elder - Roman aristocrat, military & political career, admiral of the Roman navy at Misenum, died leading an expedition to rescue survivors from the eruption of Mt. Vesuvius, wrote 37-book Natural History
- Pliny the Younger - Roman aristocrat and politician, served as governor of Bithynia, published six books of letters
- Tacitus - Roman historian (Annales, Historia, Agricola, Germania)
- Trajan - Roman emperor and general, second of the "five good emperors," expanded the empire east to reach its largest size, built Trajan's Market/Column/Forum
- Vesuvius - a volcano on the Bay of Naples that erupted in 79 C.E. that killed many people, destroyed the city of Herculaneum, and buried the cities of Pompeii in ash

Pliny the Younger – Letters, 6.16

C. Plīnius Tacitō suō s.

Petis ut tibi avunculī meī exitum scrībam, quō vērius trādere posterīs possīs. Grātiās agō; nam videō mortī eius, sī celebrētur ā tē, immortalē glōriam esse prōpositam.

2. Quamvīs enim pulcherrimārum clāde terrārum, ut populī ut urbēs memorābilī cāsū, quasi semper vīctūrus occiderit, quamvīs ipse plūrima opera et mānsūra condiderit, multum tamen perpetuitātī eius scrīptōrum tuōrum aeternitās addet. 3.

Equidem beātōs putō, quibus deōrum mūnere datum est aut facere scrībenda aut scrībere legenda, beātissimōs vērō quibus utrumque. Hōrum in numerō avunculus meus et suīs librīs et tuīs erit. Quō libentius suscipiō, dēposcō etiam quod iniungis.

4. Erat Mīsēnī classemque imperiō praesēns regēbat. Nōnum Kal. Septembrēs hōrā ferē septimā māter mea indicat eī appārēre nūbem inūsitatā et magnitūdine et speciē.

5. Ūsus ille sōle, mox frīgidā, gustāverat iacēns studēbatque; poscit soleās, ascendit locum ex quō maximē mīrāculum illud cōspicī poterat. Nūbēs, incertum procul intuentibus ex quō monte; —Vesuvium fuisse posteā cognitum est — oriēbātur, cuius similitūdinem et fōrmam nōn alia magis arbor quam pīnus expresserit.

6. Nam longissimō velut truncō ēlāta in altum quibusdam rāmīs diffundēbātur, crēdō quia recentī spīritū ēvecta, dein senēscēte eō dēstitūta aut etiam pondere suō victa in lātitudinem vānēscēbat, candida interdum, interdum sordida et maculōsa prout terram cineremve sustulerat. 7. Magnum propiusque nōscendum ut ērudītissimō virō vīsum. Iubet liburnicam aptārī; mihi sī venīre ūnā vellem facit cōpiam; respondī studēre mē mālle, et forte ipse quod scrīberem dederat. 8. Ēgrediēbātur domō; accipit cōdicillōs Rectīnae Tascī imminentī perīculō exterritae - nam villa eius subiacēbat, nec ūlla nisi nāvibus fuga—ut sē tantō discrīminī ēriperet ōrābat.

9. Vertit ille cōnsilium et quod studiōsō animō incohāverat obit maximō. Dēdūcit quadrirēmēs, ascendit ipse nōn Rectīnae modō sed multīs—erat enim frequēns amoenitās ōrae—lātūrus auxilium. 10. Properat illūc unde aliī fugiunt, rēctumque cursum rēcta gubernācula in perīculum tenet adeō solūtus metū, ut omnēs illīus malī mōtūs omnēs figūrās ut dēprēnderat oculīs dictāret ēnotāretque.

11. Iam nāvibus cinis incidēbat, quō propius accēderent, calidior et dēnsior; iam pūmicēs etiam nigrīque et ambustī et frāctī igne lapidēs; iam vadum subitum ruīnāque montis lītora obstantiā. Cūctātus paulum an retrō flecteret, mox gubernātōrī ut ita faceret monentī ‘Fortēs,’ inquit, ‘fortūna iuvat: Pomponiānum pete.’

12. Stabiīs erat dirēptus sinū mediō—nam sēnsim circumāctīs curvātisque lītoribus mare īfunditur—ibi quamquam nōndum perīculō appropinquante, cōspicuō tamen et cum crēsceret proximō, sarcinās contulerat in nāvēs, certus fugae sī contrārius ventus resēdisset. Quō tunc avunculus meus secundissimō invectus, complectitur trepidantem cōsōlātur hortātur, utque timōrem eius suā sēcūrītate lēnīret, dēferrī in balineum iubet; lōtus accubat cēnat, aut hilaris aut—quod aequē magnum—similis hilarī.

13. Interim ē Vesuviō monte plūribus locīs lātissimae flammae altaque incendia relūcēbant, quōrum fulgor et clāritās tenebrīs noctis excitābātur. Ille agrestium trepidātiōne ignēs relictōs dēsertāsque vīllās per sōlitūdinem ārdēre in remedium formīdinis dictitābat. Tum sē quiētī dedit et quiēvit vērissimō quidem somnō; nam meātus animae, quī illī propter amplitūdinem corporis gravior et sonantior erat, ab eīs quī līminī obversābantur audiēbātur.

14. Sed ārea ex quā diaeta adībātur ita iam cinere mixtisque pūmicibus opplēta surrēxerat, ut sī longior in cubiculō mora, exitus negārētur. Excitātus prōcēdit, sēque Pomponiānō cēterisque quī pervigilāverant reddit. 15. In commūne cōsultant, intrā tēcta subsistant an in apertō vagentur. Nam crēbrīs vastisque tremōribus tēcta nūtābant, et quasi ēmōta sēdibus suīs nunc hūc nunc illūc abīre aut referrī vidēbantur.

16. Sub dīō rūsus quamquam levium exēsōrumque pūmicum cāsus metuēbātur, quod tamen perīculōrum collātio ēlēgit; et apud illum quidem ratiō ratiōnem, apud aliōs timōrem timor vīcit. Cervīcālīa capitibus imposita linteīs cōstringunt; id mūnīmentum adversus incidentia fuit.

17. Iam diēs alibī, illīc nox omnibus noctibus nigrior dēnsiorque; quam tamen facēs multae variaque lūmina solvēbant. Placuit ēgredī in lītus, et ex proximō adspicere, ecquid iam mare admitteret; quod adhūc vastum et adversum permanēbat. 18. Ibi super abiectum linteum recubāns semel atque iterum frīgīdā aquam poposcit hausitque. Deinde flammae flammārumque praenūntius, odor sulphuris, aliōs in fugam vertunt, excitant illum. 19. Innītēns servolīs duōbus assurrēxit et statim concidit, ut ego colligō, crassiōre cālīgine spīritū obstrūctō, clausōque stomachō quī illī nātūrā invalidus et angustus et frequenter aestuāns erat.

20. Ubi diēs redditus—is ab eō quem novissimē vīderat tertius—corpus inventum integrum illaesum opertumque ut fuerat indūtus: habitus corporis quiēscētī quam dēfūctō similior.

21. Interim Mīsēnī ego et māter—sed nihil ad historiam, nec tū aliud quam dē exitū eius scīre voluistī. Fīnem ergō faciam. 22. Ūnum adiciam, omnia mē quibus interfueram quaeque statim, cum maximē vēra memorantur, audieram, persecūtum. Tū potissima excerpēs; aliud est enim epistulam aliud historiam, aliud amīcō aliud omnibus scrībere. Valē.

Pliny the Younger – Letters, 6.20

C. Plīnius Tacitō suō s.

Ais tē adductum litterīs quās exigentī tibi dē morte avunculī meī scrīpsī, cupere cognōscere, quōs ego Mīsēnī relictus—id enim ingressus abrūperam—nōn solum metūs vērū etiam cāsūs pertulerim.

‘Quamquam animus meminisse horret, ...

incipiam.’

2. Profectō avunculō ipse reliquum tempus studiīs—ideō enim remāseram—impendī; mox balineum cēna somnus inquiētus et brevis. 3. Praecesserat per multōs diēs tremor terrae, minus formīdolōsus quia Campāniae solitus; illā vērō nocte ita invaluit, ut nōn movērī omnia sed vertī crēderentur.

4. Irrūpit cubiculum meum māter; surgēbam invicem, sī quiēsceret excitātūrus. Resēdimus in āreā domūs, quae mare ā tēctīs modicō spatiō dīvidēbat. 5. Dubitō cōstantiam vocāre an imprūdentiam dēbeam—agēbam enim duodevīcēnsimum annum—poscō librum Titī Līvī, et quasi per ōtium legō atque etiam ut coeperam excerpō. Ecce amīcus avunculī quī nūper ad eum ex Hispāniā vēnerat, ut mē et mātre sedentēs, mē vērō etiam legentem videt, illius patientiam sēcūritātem meam corripit. Nihilō sēgnius ego intentus in librum.

6. Iam hōrā diēi prīmā, et adhūc dubius et quasi languidus diēs. Iam quassātis circumiacentibus tēctis, quamquam in apertō locō, angustō tamen, magnus et certus ruīnae metus. 7. Tum dēmum excēdere oppidō vīsum; sequitur vulgus attonitum, quodque in pavōre simile prūdētiaē, aliēnum cōsiliū suō praefert, ingentīque agmine abeuntēs premit et impellit. 8. Ēgressī tēcta cōsistimus. Multa ibi mīranda, multās formīdinēs patimur. Nam vehicula quae prōdūcī iusserāmus, quamquam in plānissimō campō, in contrāriās partēs agēbantur, ac nē lapidibus quidem fulta in eōdem vestīgiō quiēscēbant.

9. Praetereā mare in sē resorbērī et tremōre terrae quasi repellī vidēbāmus. Certē prōcesserat lītus, multaue animālia maris siccīs harēnīs dētīnēbat. Ab alterō latere nūbēs ātra et horrenda, igneī spīritūs tortīs vibrātisque discursibus rupta, in longās flammārum figūrās dēhīscēbat; fulguribus illae et similēs et maiōrēs erant. 10. Tum vērō īdem ille ex Hispāniā amīcus ācrius et īstantius ‘Sī frāter’ inquit ‘tuus, tuus avunculus vīvit, vult esse vōs salvōs; sī periit, superstitēs voluit. Proinde quid cessātīs ēvādere?’ Respondimus nōn commissūrōs nōs ut dē salūte illīus incertī nostrae cōnsulerēmus.

11. Nōn morātus ultrā prōripit sē effūsōque cursū perīculō aufertur. Nec multō post illa nūbēs dēscendere in terrās, operīre maria; cīnxerat Capreās et absconderat, Mīsēnī quod prōcurrit abstulerat. 12. Tum māter ōrāre hortārī iubēre, quōquō modō fugerem; posse enim iuvenem, sē et annīs et corpore gravem bene moritūram, sī mihi causa mortis nōn fuisset. Ego contrā salvum mē nisi ūnā nōn futūrum; dein manum eius amplexus addere gradum cōgō. Pāret aegrē incūsātque sē, quod mē morētur.

13. Iam cinis, adhūc tamen rārus. Respiciō: dēnsa cālīgō tergīs imminēbat, quae nōs torrentis modō īnfūsa terrae sequēbātur. ‘Dēflectāmus,’ inquam ‘dum vidēmus, nē in viā strātī comitantium turbā in tenebrīs obterāmur.’

14. Vix cōnsīderāmus, et nox—nōn quālis illūnis aut nūbila, sed quālīs in locīs clausīs lūmine exstīnctō. Audīrēs ululātūs fēminārum, infantum quirītātūs, clāmōrēs virōrum; aliī parentēs aliī līberōs aliī coniugēs vōcibus requirēbant, vōcibus nōscitābant; hī suum cāsum, illī suōrum miserābantur; erant quī metū mortis mortem precārentur; 15. multī ad deōs manūs tollere, plūrēs nusquam iam deōs ūllōs aeternamque illam et novissimam noctem mundō interpretābantur. Nec dēfuērunt quī fictīs mentītīsque terrōribus vēra perīcula augērent. Aderant quī Mīsēnī illud ruisse illud ārdēre falsō sed crēdentibus nūntiābant.

16. Paulum relūxit, quod nōn diēs nōbīs, sed adventantis ignis indicium vidēbātur.

Et ignis quidem longius substitit; tenebrae rūsus cinis rūsus, multus et gravis. Hunc identidem assurgentēs excutiēbāmus; opertī aliōquī atque etiam oblīsī pondere essēmus. 17. Possem glōriārī nōn gemitum mihi, nōn vōcem parum fortem in tantīs perīculīs excidisse, nisi mē cum omnibus, omnia mēcum perīre—miserō, magnō tamen mortālītātis sōlāciō—crēdidissem. 18. Tandem illa cālīgo tenuāta quasi in fūmum nebulamve discessit; mox diēs vērus; sōl etiam effulsit, lūridus tamen quālis esse cum dēficit solet. Occursābant trepidantibus adhūc oculīs mūtāta omnia altōque cinere tamquam nive obducta.

19. Regressī Mīsēnum cūrātis utcumque corporibus suspēnsam dubiamque noctem spē ac metū exēgimus. Metus praevalēbat; nam et tremor terrae persevērābat, et plērīque lymphātī terrificīs vāticinātiōnibus et sua et aliēna mala lūdificābantur. 20.

Nōbīs tamen nē tunc quidem, quamquam et expertīs perīculum et expectantibus, abeundī cōnsilium, dōnec dē avunculō nūntius.

Haec nēquāquam historiā digna nōn scrīptūrus legēs et tibi scīlicet quī requīsītī imputābis, sī digna nē epistolā quidem vidēbuntur. Valē.

Pliny the Younger – Letters, 7.27

C. Plīnius Surae suō s.

1. Et mihi discendī et tibi docendī facultātem ōtium praebet. Igitur perquam velim scīre, esse phantasmata et habēre propriam figūrā nūmenque aliquod putēs an inānia et vāna ex metū nostrō imāginem accipere. 2. Ego ut esse crēdam in prīmīs eō dūcor, quod audiō accidisse Curtiō Rūfō. Tenuis adhūc et obscurus, obtinentī Āfricam comes haeserat. Inclīnātō diē spatiābātur in porticū; offertur eī mulieris figūra hūmānā grandior pulchriorque. Perterritō Āfricam sē futūrōrum praenūntiam dīxit: itūrum enim Rōmam honōrēsque gestūrum, atque etiam cum summō imperiō in eandem prōvinciam reversūrum, ibique moritūrum.

3. Facta sunt omnia. Praetereā accēdentī Carthāginem ēgredientīque nāve eadem figūra in lītore occurrisset narrātur. Ipse certē implicitus morbō, futūra praeteritīs adversa secundīs augurātus, spem salūtis nūllō suōrum dēspērante prōiēcit.

4. Iam illud nōne et magis terribile et nōn minus mīrum est quod expōnam ut accēpī? 5. Erat Athēnīs spatiōsa et capāx domus sed infāmis et pestilēns. Per silentium noctis sonus ferrī, et sī attenderēs ācrius, strepitus vinculōrum longius přimō, deinde ē proximō reddēbātur: mox appārebat īdōlon, senex maciē et squālōre cōnfectus, prōmissā barbā horrentī capillō; crūribus compedēs, manibus catēnās gerēbat quatiēbatque.

6. Inde inhabitantibus trīstēs dīraeque noctēs per metum vigilābantur; vigiliam morbus, et crēscente formīdine mors sequēbātur. Nam interdiū quoque, quamquam abscesserat imāgō, memoria imāginis oculīs inerrābat, longiorque causīs timōris timor erat. Dēserta inde et damnāta sōlitūdine domus tōtaque illī mōnstrō relicta; prōscribēbātur tamen, seu quis emere seu quis condūcere ignārus tantī malī vellet. 7.

Venit Athēnās philosophus Athēnodōrus, legit titulum auditōque pretiō, quia suspecta vilitās, percunctātus omnia docētur ac nihilō minus, immō tantō magis condūcit.

Ubi coepit advesperāscere, iubet sternī sibi in prīmā domūs parte, poscit pugillārēs stilum lūmen, suōs omnēs in interiōra dīmittit; ipse ad scribendum animum oculōs manum intendit, nē vacua mēns audīta simulācra et inānēs sibi metūs fingeret. 8.

Initiō, quāle ubīque, silentium noctis; dein concutī ferrum, vincula movērī. Ille nōn tollere oculōs, nōn remittere stilum, sed offirmāre animum auribusque praetendere.

Tum crebrēscere fragor, adventāre et iam ut in līmine, iam ut intrā līmen audīrī.

Respicit, videt agnōscitque nārrātam sibi effigiem.

9. Stābat innuēbatque digitō similis vocantī. Hic contrā ut paulum expectāret manū significat rūsusque cērīs et stilō incumbit. Illa scrībentis capitī catēnīs īnsonābat.

Respicit rūsus idem quod prius innuentem, nec morātus tollit lūmen et sequitur. 10.

Ībat illa lentō gradū quasi gravis vinculīs. Postquam dēflexit in āream domūs, repente dīlāpsa dēserit comitem. Dēsertus herbās et folia concerpta signum locō pōnit. 11.

Posterō diē adit magistrātūs, monet ut illum locum effodī iubeant.

Inveniuntur ossa īnsera catēnīs et implicita, quae corpus aevō terrāque putrefactum nūda et exēsa relīquerat vinculīs; collēcta pūblicē sepeliuntur. Domus postea rīte condītīs mānibus caruit.

12. Et haec quidem affīrmantibus crēdō; illud affīrmāre aliīs possum. Est lībertus mihi nōn illitterātus. Cum hōc minor frāter eōdem lectō quiēscēbat. Is vīsus est sibi cernere quendam in torō residentem, admoventemque capitī suō cultrōs, atque etiam ex ipsō vertice amputantem capillōs. Ubi illūxit, ipse circā verticem tōnsus, capillī iacentēs reperiuntur.

13. Exiguum temporis medium, et rursus simile aliud priori fidem fecit. Puer in paedagogio mixtus pluribus dormiebat. Venerunt per fenestras—ita narrat—in tunicis albis duo cubantemque detonderunt et quam venerant recesserunt. Hunc quoque tonsum sparsosque circa capillos diēs ostendit. 14. Nihil notabile secutum, nisi forte quod non fui reus, futurus, si Domitianus sub quo haec acciderunt diutius vixisset. Nam in scrinio eius datus a Caro de me libellus inventus est; ex quo coniectari potest, quia res moris est submittere capillum, recisos meorum capillos depulsi quod imminabat periculi signum fuisse.

15. Proinde rogo, eruditionem tuam intendas. Digna res est quam diu multumque consideres; ne ego quidem indignus, cui copiam scientiae tuae facias. 16. Licet etiam utramque in partem—ut solēs—disputēs, ex altera tamen fortius, ne me suspensum incertumque dimittas, cum mihi consulendi causa fuerit, ut dubitare desinerem. Valē.

Pliny the Younger – Letters, 10.37

C. Plīnius Traiānō Imperātōrī

In aquae ductum, Domine, Nīcomēdēnsēs impendērunt HS XXX CCCXVIII, quī imperfectus adhūc omissus, dēstrūctus etiam est; rūsus in alium ductum ērogāta sunt CC. Hōc quoque relictō novō impendiō est opus, ut aquam habeant, quī tantam pecūniam male perdidērunt. 2. Ipse pervēnī ad fontem pūrissimum, ex quō vidētur aqua dēbere perdūcī, sicut initiō temptātum erat, arcuātō opere, nē tantum ad plāna cīvītātis et humilia perveniat. Manent adhūc paucissimī arcūs: possunt et ērigī quīdam lapide quadrātō, quī ex superiōre opere dētractus est; aliqua pars, ut mihi vidētur, testāceō opere agenda erit, id enim et facilius et vīlius. 3. Sed in prīmīs necessārium est mittī ā tē vel aquilegem vel architectum, nē rūsus ēveniat quod accidit. Ego illud ūnum affirmō, et ūtilitātem operis et pulchritūdinem saeculō tuō esse dignissimam.

Pliny the Younger – Letters, 10.90

C. Plīnius Traiānō Imperātōrī

Sinōpēnsēs, Domine, aquā dēficiuntur; quae vidētur et bona et cōpiōsa ab sextō decimō mīliārīō posse perdūcī. Est tamen statim ab capite paulō amplius passūs mīlle locus suspectus et mollis, quem ego interim explōrārī modicō impendiō iussī, an recipere et sustinēre opus possit. 2. Pecūnia cūrantibus nōbīs contracta nōn dēerit, sī tū, Domine, hoc genus operis et salūbritātī et amoenitātī valdē sitientis colōniae indulseris.

Pliny the Younger – Letters, 10.5

C. Plīnius Traiānō Imperātōrī

Proximō annō, Domine, gravissimā valētūdine usque ad perīculum vītae vexātus iatralipten assūmpsī; cuius sollicitudinī et studiō tuae tantum indulgentiae beneficiō referre grātiam parem possum. 2. Quārē rogō dēs eī cīvitatē Rōmānam. Est enim peregrīnae condiciōnis manūmissus ā peregrīnā. Vocātur ipse Arpocrās, patrōnam habuit Thermuthin Theōnis, quae iam prīdem dēfūncta est. Item rogō dēs iūs Quirītium lībertīs Antōniae Maximillae, ōrnātissimae fēminae, Hediae et Antōniae Harmeridī; quod ā tē petente patrōnā petō.

Pliny the Younger – Letters, 10.6

C. Plīnius Traiānō Imperātōrī

Agō grātiās, Domine, quod et iūs Quirītium lībertīs necessāriae mihi fēminae et cīvitātem Rōmānam Arpocratī, iātraliptae meō, sine morā indulsistī. Sed cum annōs eius et cēsum sicut praecēperās ēderem, admonitus sum ā perītioribus dēbuisse mē ante eī Alexandrīnam cīvitātem impetrāre, deinde Rōmānam, quoniam esset Aegyptius. 2. Ego autem, quia inter Aegyptiōs cēterōsque peregrīnōs nihil interesse crēdēbam, contentus fueram hoc solum scrībere tibi, esse eum ā peregrīnā manūmissum patrōnamque eius iam prīdem dēcessisse. Dē quā ignōrantīā meā nōn queror, per quam stetit ut tibi prō eōdem homine saepius obligārer. Rogō itaque, ut beneficiō tuō lēgitimē fruī possim, tribuās eī et Alexandrīnam cīvitātem et Rōmānam. Annōs eius et cēsum, nē quid rūsus indulgentiam tuam morārētur, lībertīs tuīs quibus iusserās mīsī.

Pliny the Younger – Letters, 10.7

Traiānus Plīniō

Cīvitātem Alexandrīnam secundum īnstitūtiōnem prīncipum nōn temere dare prōposuī. Sed cum Arpocrātī, iātraliptae tuō, iam cīvitātem Rōmānam impetrāverīs, huic quoque petītiōnī tuae negāre nōn sustineō. Tū, ex quō nomō sit, nōtum mihi facere dēbēbis, ut epistulam tibi ad Pompēium Plantam praefectum Aegyptī amīcum meum mittam.

Pliny the Younger – Letters, 6.4

C. Plīnius Calpurniae suae s.

Numquam sum magis dē occupātiōnibus meīs questus, quae mē nōn sunt passae aut proficīscētem tē valētūdinis causā in Campāniam prōsequī aut profectam ē vestīgīō subsequī. 2. Nunc enim praecipuē simul esse cupiēbam, ut oculīs meīs crēderem quid vīribus quid corpusculō apparārēs, ecquid dēnique sēcessūs voluptātēs regiōnisque abundantiam inoffēnsa trāsmitterēs. 3. Equidem etiam fortem tē nōn sine cūrā dēsīderārem; est enim suspēsum et ānxiū dē eō quem ārdentissimē dīligās interdum nihil scīre. 4. Nunc vērō mē cum absentiae tum īnfirmitātis tuae ratiō incerta et varia sollicitūdine exterret. Vereor omnia, imāginor omnia, quaeque nātūra metuentium est, ea maximē mihi quae maximē abōminor fingō. 5. Quō impēnsius rogō, ut timōrī meō cottīdiē singulīs vel etiam bīnīs epistulīs cōsulās. Erō enim sēcūrior dum legō, statimque timēbō cum lēgerō. Valē.

Pliny the Younger – Letters, 6.7

C. Plīnius Calpurniae suae s.

Scribis tē absentīā meā nōn mediocriter afficī ūnumque habēre sōlācium, quod prō mē libellōs meōs teneās, saepe etiam in vestīgīō meō collocēs. 2. Grātum est quod nōs requīris, grātum quod hīs fōmentīs acquiēscis; invicem ego epistulās tuās lectitō atque identidem in manūs quasi novās sūmō. 3. Sed eō magis ad dēsīderium tuī accendor: nam cuius litterae tantum habent suāvitātis, huius sermōnibus quantum dulcēdinis inest! Tū tamen quam frequentissimē scribe, licet hoc ita mē dēlectet ut torqueat. Valē.

Names & terms to know in Vergil's Aeneid

Characters:

- Aeneas - prince of Troy, leads a band of refugees to Italy, son of Venus & Anchises, the human protagonist of the Aeneid
- Amata - Queen of Lavinium, wife of Latinus, mother of Lavinia, wanted Lavinia to marry Turnus, driven to rage by Juno sending a Fury
- Anchises - Trojan nobleman, Aeneas' father, slept with Venus once but wasn't allowed to tell anyone
- Ascanius/Iulus - son of Aeneas and Creusa
- Camilla - warrior woman, leader of the Volscians (an Italian nation), daughter of Metabus
- Creusa - Aeneas' first wife, mother of Ascanius, dies in fall of Troy (the Illopersus)
- Dido - Tyrian noble turned queen of Carthage, widow of Sychaeus, brother of Pygmalion, love interest of Aeneas, victim of the gods' schemes, kills herself
- Evander - king of the Aracadians, a Greek tribe living in what will become Rome, ally of Aeneas, father of Pallas
- Iarbas - King of the Gaetulians in north Africa, suitor for Dido, gave Dido the land she used to build Carthage, prays to his father Jupiter when he hears that Dido is with Aeneas
- Latinus - king of Lavinium
- Lavinia - princess of Lavinium, only child of King Latinus, almost engaged to Turnus before becoming the second wife of Aeneas
- Lavinium - the city ruled by Latinus, then by Aeneas, then by Ascanius/Iulus
- Pallas - young friend of Aeneas, Arcadian prince, son of King Evander, killed by Turnus, avenged by Aeneas
- Turnus - leader of the Rutulians (an Italian nation), descendent of Io & Jupiter, was almost engaged to Lavinia, human antagonist of the Aeneid, dies at the end

Places:

- Bay of Naples – The bay on the southern west coast of Italy that was the vacation destination of the Roman elite, location of both the Sibyl @ Cumae and Mt. Vesuvius
- Carthage – City in north Africa across the narrowest point of the Mediterranean Sea from Italy, in modern day Tunisia, colony of the Phoenician city of Tyre, ruled by Queen Dido
- Etruria – The region of Italy north of Rome, home of the Etruscans
- Hesperia – Italy, “the western land” in Greek
- Latium – The region of west-central Italy around Rome
- Sicily – The triangular island off the southwestern point (the toe) of Italy

Other names for Troy:

- Ilium – Troy (specifically the inner city & citadel)
- Pergamum – Troy (specifically the inner city & citadel)

Other names for the Trojans:

- Aeneadae – the followers of Aeneas, referring to the refugee Trojans who travel with him
- Dardanians –the descendants of Dardanus, one of the founders of Troy
- Phrygians – the people of Phrygia, the region of Asia Minor around Troy
- Teucrians –the descendants of Teucer, one of the founders of Troy

Other names for the Greeks:

- Argives or Argolids– the people of Argos, a city in Greece ruled by Agamemnon, who led the Greeks in the Trojan War
- Aecheans – Aechea is another name for Greece
- Danaeans – the descendents of Danaë
- Hellenes – what the Greeks called themselves (Hellas = Greece)

Roman gods:

- Apollo - God of sun, archery, music, poetry, prophecy and medicine. Twin brother of Diana. Supported the Trojans in the Trojan War.
- Diana - Roman name for Artemis, the Greek goddess of the moon, hunting, archery, and militant virginity. Twin sister of Apollo. Kills any other man that tries to approach her. Supported the Trojans in the Trojan War.
- Juno - Roman name for Hera, the Greek goddess of marriage and queen of the Gods. Bird = peacock. Sister/wife of Jupiter, who is always cheating on her. Supported the Greeks in the Trojan War. Patron goddess of Carthage. Still bitter about the Judgment of Paris. Divine antagonist of the Aeneid for all these reasons.
- Jupiter - Roman name for the Greek god Zeus (also called Jove in Latin), the king of the gods, god of the sky/thunder/lightning. Brother of Poseidon & Pluto. Husband/brother of Juno. Bird = eagle. Weapon/symbol = lightning bolt. Calm & controlled in the Aeneid (where he is closely associated with Fate) unlike his usual presentation in mythology as a serial philanderer & rapist.
- Mars - Roman name for Ares, the Greek god of War. Supported the Trojans in the Trojan War. Purported father of the twins Romulus & Remus (the founders of Rome).
- Mercury - Roman name for Hermes, the Greek god of commerce, merchants, travel, trade, trickery, & cunning. Messenger of the gods, often delivering Jupiter's edicts. Guides the souls of the deceased to the Underworld in his role as Hermes Psychopompos.
- Minerva – Roman name for Athena, the Greek goddess of wisdom, battle strategy, and arts & crafts. Supported the Greeks in the Trojan War. Bird = owl. Weapon = spear. Always depicted wearing helmet, breastplate, spear, & shield (w/ the aegis either on her shield or breastplate). Patron goddess & divine BFF of Odysseus.
- Neptune - Roman name for Poseidon, the Greek god of the sea. Brother of Jupiter & Pluto. Supported the Greeks in the Trojan War. Animal = horse. Weapon = trident. Calm and controlled in the Aeneid unlike his demeanor in the Odyssey.
- Pluto - Roman name for Hades, the Greek god of the Underworld. Also called Dis in Latin. Husband of Persephone (the daughter of Ceres whom he kidnapped). Associated with wealth and hospitality because of the size of his domain and the number of guests

- Saturn – Roman name for Kronos, the father of Zeus & the other Olympian gods; the Greek god Kronos is known for castrating his father and swallowing his children after they were born so they couldn't grow up to overthrow him like he did to his father; the Roman god Saturn is known as a god of primitive pastoral peace and connected with Italy before Greek colonization
- Venus - Roman name for Aphrodite, the Greek goddess of love and beauty. Mother of Aeneas. Supported the Trojans in the Trojan War. Works tirelessly to help her son throughout the Aeneid. Celebrated by the Julio-Claudian dynasty because of their purported ancestry through Aeneas.
- Vulcan - Roman name for Hephaestus, god of blacksmiths, craftsmen, and technology. Lame/crippled leg from getting thrown off Mt. Olympus by Jupiter. Forges Aeneas' shield in the Aeneid and Achilles' shield in the Iliad.

Roman culture terms:

- Aeneid - an epic poem written by Vergil (Publius Vergilius Maro) about the journey of the Trojan prince Aeneas as he leads a group of refugees from the Fall of Troy and resettles in Italy
- Lārēs - One's household gods, images of one's famous ancestors or gods to which one's family is devoted
- Paterfamilias - the male head of a household who held absolute legal and moral authority over all family members, including adult children, and all family property
- Penātēs - The gods of one's country, statues from temples or shrines of the primary god(s) of that city-state
- Pietās/piety - Duty/devotion to (1) one's gods, (2) one's country, and (3) one's family
- Pudor/pudicitia - Feminine virtue: modesty, chastity, decorum, etiquette (lady-like behavior)

Characteristics of epic poetry:

- Ecphrasis - an extended and elaborate description of an important object or place
- Epic catalogue - a long, detailed list of objects, places, or people that is characteristic of epic poetry
- Epic simile - a long, detailed comparison between two things, actions, or circumstances. Vergil often frames these with the correlative pair ut...sic... (“just as... just so...”).
- Heroic *katabasis - the descent of the epic protagonist into the Underworld, often in search of knowledge relating to his quest, whereby he goes beyond normal mortal limits and becomes a wiser, more complete hero/leader.
- In medias res - where the epic poet begins the narrative of the story in the middle of the plot and flashes back to describe the beginning rather than beginning at the start and proceeding chronologically.
- Invocation of the Muses - where the poet asks the nine goddesses of artistic inspiration, to sing to him about the subject matter, thereby imbuing his work with divine authority and truthfulness.

Vergil, Aeneid 1

Arma virumque canō, Troiae quī prīmus ab ōrīs	1
Ītaliā fātō profugus Lāvīnaque vēnit lītora—multum ille et terrīs iactātus et altō vī superum, saevae memorem Iūnōnis ob īram, multa quoque et bellō passus, dum conderet urbem	5
īnferretque deōs Latīō—genus unde Latīnum Albānīque patrēs atque altae moenia Rōmae.
Mūsa, mihī causās memorā, quō nūmine laesō quidve dolēns rēgīna deum tot volvere cāsūs insignem pietāte virum, tot adīre labōrās	10
impulerit. Tantaene animīs caelestibus īrae?
Urbs antīqua fuit (Tyriī tenuēre colōnī) Karthāgō, Ītaliā contrā Tiberīnaque longē ōstia, dīves opum studiīsque asperrima bellī;
quam Iūnō fertur terrīs magis omnibus ūnam	15

posthabitā coluisse Samō: hīc illius arma, hīc currus fuit; hoc rēgnum dea gentibus esse,
sī quā fāta sinant, iam tum tenditque fovetque.

Prōgeniem sed enim Troiānō ā sanguine dūcī audierat Tyriās ōlim quae verteret arcēs; 20

hinc populum lātē rēgem bellōque superbum

ventūrum excidiō Libyae: sīc volvere Parcās

Id metuēns veterisque memor Sāturnia bellī, prīma quod ad Troiam prō cārīs gesserat Argīs

(necdum etiam causae īrārū saevīque dolōrēs 25

exciderant animō; manet altā mente repostum

iūdicium Paridis sprētaeque iniūria formae et genus invīsum et raptī Ganymēdis honōrēs)

hīs accēnsa super iactātōs aequore tōtō

Trōās, relliquiās Danaum atque immītis Achillī, 30

arcēbat longē Latiō, multōsque per annōs

errābant āctī fātīs maria omnia circum.

Tantae mōlis erat Rōmānam condere gentem.

Ēripiunt subitō nūbēs caelumque diemque

Teucōrum ex oculīs; pontō nox incubat ātra.

Ītonuēre polī et crēbrīs micat ignibus aethēr 90

praesentemque virīs intentant omnia mortem.

Extemplō Aenēae solvuntur frīgore membra;

Ingemit et duplicēs tendēns ad sīdera palmās

tālia vōce refert: “Ō terque quarterque beātī, quīs ante ōra patrum Troiae sub moenibus altīs 95

contigit oppetere! Ō Danaum fortissime gentis

Tȳdīdē! mēne Īliacīs occumbere campīs

nōn potuisse tuāque animam hanc effundere dextrā

saevus ubi Aeacidae tēlō iacet Hector, ubi ingēns

Sarpēdon, ubi tot Simoīs correpta sub undīs 100

scūta virum galeāsque et fortia corpora volvit!”

Tālia iactantī strīdēns Aquilōne procella vēlum adversa ferit, flūctūsque ad sīdera tollit.

Franguntur rēmī, tum prōra āvertit et undīs

dat latus, īnsequitur cumulō praeruptus aquae mōns 105

Hī summō in flūctū pendent; hīs unda dehīscēns

terram inter flūctūs aperit, furit aestus harēnis.

rēgīna ad templum, formā pulcherrima Dīdō, incessit magnā iuvenum stīpante catervā.

Quālis in Eurōtae rīpīs aut per iuga Cynthī exercet Dīāna chorōs, quam mīlle secūtae

hinc atque hinc glomerantur Orēades; illa pharetram 500

fert umerō gradiēnsque deās superēminet omnēs

(Lātōnae tacitum pertemptant gaudia pectus):

tālis erat Dīdō, tālem sē laeta ferēbat per mediōs īnstāns operī rēgnīsq̄e futūrīs.

Tum foribus dīvae, mediā testūdine templī, 505

saepta armīs soliōque altē subnixa resēdit.

Iūra dabat lēgēsque virīs, operumque labōrem partibus aequābat iūstīs aut sorte trahēbat:

cum subitō Aenēās consursū accēdere magnō

Anthea Sergestumque videt fortemque Cloanthum 510

Teucōrumque aliōs, āter quōs aequore turbō

dispulerat penitusque aliās āvēxerat ōrās.

Vergil, Aeneid 2

Prīmus ibi ante omnēs magnā comitante catervā 40

Lāocoōn ardēns summā dēcurrit ab arce, et procul: “Ō miserī, quae tanta īnsānia, cīvēs?

Crēditis āvectōs hostēs? Aut ūlla putātis

Dōna carēre dolīs Danaum? Sīc nōtus Ulixēs?

Aut hōc inclūsī lignō occultantur Achīvī, 45

Aut haec in nostrōs fabricāta est māchina mūrōs, īnspectūra domōs ventūraque dēsuper urbī,

aut aliquis latet error; equō nē crēdite, Teucrī.

Quidquid id est, timeō Danaōs et dōna ferentēs.”

Sīc fātus validīs ingentem vīribus hastam 50

in latus inque ferī curvam compāgibus alvum contorsit. Stetit illa tremēns, uterōque recussō īsonuēre cavae gemitumque dedēre cavernae.

Et, sī fāta deum, sī mēns nōn laeva fuisset,

impulerat ferrō Argolicās foedāre latebrās,

55

Troiaque nunc stāret, Priamīque arx alta manērēs.

Lāocoōn, ductus Neptūnō sorte sacerdos, sollemnēs taurum ingentem mactābat ad ārās.

Ecce autem geminī ā Tenedō tranquilla per alta

(horrēscō referēs) immēnsīs orbibus anguēs

incumbunt pelagō pariterque ad lītora tendunt;

205

pectora quōrum inter flūctūs arrēcta iubaeque

sanguineae superant undās; pars cētera pontum

pōne legit sinuatque immēnsa volūmine terga.

Fit sonitus spūmante salō; iamque arva tenēbant

ardentēs oculōs suffectī sanguine et ignī

210

sībila lambēbant linguīs vibrantibus ōra.

Diffugimus vīsū exsanguēs. Illī agmine certō

Lāocoōnta petunt; et prīmum parva duōrum corpora nātōrum serpēns amplexus uterque implicat et miserōs morsū dēpascitur artūs;

215

post ipsum auxiliō subeuntem ac tēla ferentem corripiunt spīrīsque ligant ingentibus; et iam

bis medium amplexī, bis collō squāmea circum

terga datī superant capite et cervīcibus altīs.

Ille simul manibus tendit dīvellere nōdōs

220 perfūsus saniē vittās ātrōque venēnō, clāmōrēs simul horrendōs ad sīdera tollit:

quālis mūgitus, fūgit cum saucius āram

taurus et incertam excussit cervīce secūrim.

At geminī lāpsū dēlūbra ad summa dracōnēs

225

effugiunt saevaeque petunt Trītonidis arcem

sub pedibusque deae clipeīque sub orbe teguntur.

Tum vērō tremefacta novus per pectora cūctīs

īnsinuat pavor, et scelus expendisse merentem

Lāocoönta ferunt, sacrum quī cuspide rōbur 230

laeserit et tergō scelerātam intorserit hastam.

Dūcendum ad sēdēs simulācrum ōrandaque dīvae nūmina conclāmant.

Dīvīdimus mūrōs et moenia pandimus urbis.

Accingunt omnēs operī pedibusque rotārum 235

subiiciunt lāpsūs, et stuppea vincula collō

intendunt: scandit fātālis māchina mūrōs

fēta armīs. Puerī circum innūptaeque puellae sacra canunt fūnemque manū contingere gaudent:

illa subit mediaeque mināns inlābitur urbī. 240

Ō patria, Ō dīvum domus Īlium et incluta bellō moenia Dardanidum! Quarter ipsō in līmine portae substitit atque uterō sonitum quarter arma dedēre;

īnstāmus tamen immemorēs caecīque furōre

et mōnstrum īnfēlīx sacrātā sistimus arce. 245

Tunc etiam fātīs aperit Cassandra futūrīs

ōra deī iussū nōn umquam crēdita Teucrīs.

Nōs dēlūbra deum miserī, quibus ultimus esset

ille diēs, fēstā vėlāmus fronde per urbem.

non-syllabus passage #1

Tempus erat quō prīma quiēs mortālibus aegrīs

incipit et dōnō dīvum grātissima serpit.

In somnīs, ecce, ante oculōs maestissimus Hector 270

vīsus adesse mihī largōsque effundere flētūs, raptātus bīgīs ut quondam, āterque cruentō pulvere perque pedēs trāiectus lōra tumentēs.

Ei mihi, quālis erat, quantum mūtātus ab illō

Hectore quī rediit exuviās indūtus Achillī, 275

vel Danaum Phrygiōs iaculātus puppibus ignēs;

squālentem barbam et concrētōs sanguine crīnēs vulneraque illa gerēns, quae circum plūrima mūrōs accēpit patriōs. Ultrō flēns ipse vidēbar

compellāre virum et maestās exprōmere vōcēs; 280

“Ō lūx Dardaniae, spēs Ō fidissima Teucrum, quae tantae tenuēre morae? Quibus Hector ab ōrīs expectāte venīs? Ut tē post multa tuōrum fūnera, post variōs hominumque urbisque labōrēs dēfessī aspiciamus? Quae causa indigna serēnōs 285 foedāvit vultūs? Aut cūr haec vulnera cernō?”

Ille nihil, nec mē quaerentem vāna morātur,
Sed graviter gemitūs īmō dē pectore dūcēns, “Heu fuge, nāte deā, tēque hīs” ait “ēripe flammīs.
Hostis habet mūrōs; ruit altō ā culmine Troia. 290
Sat patriae Priamōque datum: sī Pergama dextrā dēfendī possent, etiam hāc dēfēnsa fuissent.
Sacra suōsque tibī commendat Troia Penātēs;
hōs cape fātōrum comitēs, hīs moenia quaere magna, pererrātō statuēs quae dēnique pontō.” 295 Sīc ait et manibus vittās Vestamque potentem aeternumque adytīs effert penetrālibus ignem.

non-syllabus passage #2

At mē tum primum saevus circumstetit horror.

Obstipui; subiit cari genitoris imago, 560

ut regem aequaeuum crudeli vulnere vidi

vitam exhalantem; subiit deserta Creusa et direpta domus et parvi casus Iuli.

Respicio et quae sit me circum copia lustror.

Deseruere omnes defessi, et corpora saltu 565

ad terram misere aut ignibus aegra dedere.

Iamque adeo super unus eram, cum limina Vestae

servantem et tacitam secreta in sede latentem

Tyndarida aspicio; dant claram incendia lucem

erranti passimque oculos per cuncta ferenti. 570

Illa sibi infestis eversa ob Pergama Teucros et poenas Danaum et deserti coniugis iras praemetuens, Troiae et patriae communis Erinyes, abdiderat sēsē atque ārīs invīsa sedēbat.

Exarsēre ignēs animō; subit īra cadentem 575

ulciscī patriam et scelerātās sūmere poenās.

“Scīlicet haec Spartam incolumis patriāsque Mycēnās aspiciet, partōque ībit rēgīna triumphō, coniugiumque domumque patris nātōsque vidēbit

Īliadum turbā et Phrygiīs comitāta ministrīs? 580 occiderit ferrō Priamus? Troia arserit ignī?

Dardanium totiēns sūdārit sanguine lītus?

Nōn ita. namque etsī nūllum memorābile nōmen fēmineā in poenā est, habet haec victōria laudem;

exstīnxisse nefās tamen et sūmpsisse merentēs 585

laudābor poenās, animumque explēsse iuvābit

ultrīcis flammae et cinerēs satiāsse meōrum.”

Tālia iactābam et furiātā mente ferēbar, cum mihi sē, nōn ante oculīs tam clāra, videndam obtulit et pūrā per noctem in lūce refulsit 590

alma parēns, confessa deam quālisque vidērī

caelicolīs et quanta solet, dextrāque prehēnsū

continuit roseōque haec insuper addidit ōre:

“Nāte, quis indomitās tantus dolor excitat īrās?

Quid furis aut quōnam nostrī tibi cūra recessit? 595

Nōn prius aspiciēs ubi fessum aetāte parentem

līqueris Anchīsēn, superet coniūnxne Creūsa

Ascaniusque puer? Quōs omnēs undique Graiae circum errant aciēs et, nī mea cūra resistat, iam flammae tulerint inimīcus et hauserit ensis. 600

nōn tibi Tyndaridis faciēs invīsa Lacaenae

culpātusve Paris, dīvum inclēmentia, dīvum

hās ēvertit opēs sternitque ā culmine Troiam.

Aspice (namque omnem, quae nunc obducta tuentī mortālēs hebetat vīsūs tibi et ūmida circum 605

cālīgat, nūbem ēripiam; tū nē qua parentis iussa timē neu praeceptīs pārēre recūsā):

hīc, ubi disiectās mōlēs āvulsaque saxīs

saxa vidēs, mixtōque undantem pulvere fūmum,

Neptūnus mūrōs magnōque ēmōta tridentī 610

fundāmenta quatit tōtamque ā sedibus urbem

ēruit. Hīc Iūnō Scaeās saevissima portās prīma tenet sociumque furēns ā nāvibus agmen

ferrō accīncta vocat.

Iam summās arcēs Trītōnia, respice, Pallas 615

insēdit limbō effulgēns et Gorgone saevā.

Ipse pater Danaīs animōs vīrēsque secundās

sufficit, ipse deōs in Dardana suscitāt arma.

Ēripe, nāte, fugam finemque impōne labōrī.

Nūsquam aberō et tūtum patriō tē līmine sistam.” 620

Vergil, Aeneid 4

Nunc media Aenēan sēcum per moenia dūcit,

Sīdoniāsque ostentat opēs urbemque parātam; 75

incipit effārī, mediāque in vōce resistit;

nunc eadem lābente diē convīvia quaerit,

Īliacōsque iterum dēmēns audīre labōrēs

exposcit, pendetque iterum nārrantis ab ōre.

Post, ubi dīgressī, lūmenque obscūra vicissim 80

lūna premit suādentque cadentia sīdera somnōs, sōla domō maeret vacuā, strātīsque relictīs incubat, illum absēns absentem auditque videtque;

aut gremiō Ascanium, genitōris imāgine captā,

dētinet, īfandum sī fallere possit amōrem. 85

Nōn coepae adsurgunt turrēs, nōn arma iuventus

exercet, portūsve aut prōpugnācula bellō

tūta parant; pendent opera interrupta, minaeque mūrōrum ingentēs aequātaque māchina caelō.

Spēluncam Dīdō dux et Troiānus eandem 165

dēveniunt. Prīma et Tellūs et prōnuba Iūnō dant signum; fulsēre ignēs et cōnscius aethēr cōnūbiīs, summōque ululārunt vertice nymphae.

Ille diēs prīmus lētī prīmusque malōrum

causa fuit; neque enim speciē fāmāve movētur 170

nec iam fūrtīvum Dīdō meditātur amōrem:

coniugium vocat, hōc praetexit nōmine culpam.

Exemplō Libyae magnās it Fāma per urbēs,

Fāma, malum quā nōn aliud vėlōcius ūllum:

mōbilitāte viget vīrēsque adquīrit eundō, 175

parva metū prīmō, mox sēsē attollit in aurās ingrediturque solō et caput inter nūbila condit.

Illam Terra parēns irā inrītāta deōrum

extrēmum, ut perhibent, Coeō Enceladōque sorōrem

prōgenuit pedibus celerem et pernīcibus ālīs, 180

mōnstrum horrendum, ingēns, cui quot sunt corpore plūmae, tot vigilēs oculī subter (mīrabile dictū), tot linguae, totidem ōra sonant, tot subrigit aurēs.

Nocte volat caelī mediō terraeque per umbram

strīdēns, nec dulcī dēclīnat lūmina somnō; 185

lūce sedet custōs aut summī culmine tēctī

turribus aut altīs, et magnās territat urbēs, tam fictī prāvīque tenāx quam nuntia vērī.

Haec tum multiplicī populōs sermōne replēbat gaudēns, et pariter facta atque īfecta canēbat: 190

vēnisse Aenēān Troiānō sanguine crētum, cui sē pulchra virō dignētur iungere Dīdō;

nunc hiemem inter sē luxū, quam longa, fōvēre rēgnōrum immemorēs turpīque cupīdine captōs.

Haec passim dea foeda virum diffundit in ōra. 195

Prōtinus ad rēgem cursūs dētorquet Iarbān incenditque animum dictīs atque aggerat īrās.

“Dissimulāre etiam spērāstī, perfīde, tantum 305

posse nefās tacitusque meā dēcēdere terrā?

Nec tē noster amor nec tē data dextera quondam nec moritūra tenet crūdēlī fūnere Dīdō?

Quīn etiam hībernō mōlīris sīdere classem et mediīs properās Aquilōnibus īre per altum, 310

crūdēlis? Quid, sī nōn arva aliēna domōsque ignōtās peterēs, et Troia antīqua manēret,

Troia per undōsum peterētur classibus aequor?

Mēne fugis? Per ego hās lacrimās dextramque tuam tē

(quandō aliud mihi iam miserae nihil ipsa relīquī), 315 per cōnūbia nostra, per inceptōs hymenaeōs, sī bene quid dē tē meruī, fuit aut tibi quicquam dulce meum, miserēre domūs lābentis et istam, ōrō, sī quis adhūc precibus locus, exue mentem.

Tē propter Libycae gentēs Nomadumque tyrannī 320

ōdēre, īfensī Tyriī; tē propter eundem

exstīctus pudor et, quā sōlā sīdera adībam, fāma prior. Cui mē moribundam dēseris,--hospes

(hoc solum nōmen quoniam dē coniuge restat)?

Quid moror? An mea Pygmalion dum moenia frāter 325

dēstruat aut captam dūcat Gaetūlus Iarbās?

saltem sī qua mihī dē tē suscepta fuisset

ante fugam subolēs, sī quis mihi parvulus aulā lūderet Aenēās, quī tē tamen ōre referret, nōn equidem omnīnō capta ac dēserta vidērer.” 330

Dīxerat. Ille Iovis monitīs immōta tenēbat lūmina et obnixus cūram sub corde premēbat.

Tandem pauca refert: “Ego tē, quae plūrima fandō

ēnumerāre valēs, numquam, rēgīna, negābō

prōmeritam, nec mē meminisse pigēbit Elissae 335

dum memor ipse meī, dum spīritus hōs regit artūs.

Prō rē pauca loquar. Neque ego hanc abscondere fūrtō spērāvī (nē finge) fugam, nec coniugis umquam praetendī taedās aut haec in foedera vēnī.

Mē sī fāta meīs paterentur dūcere vītā 340

auspiciīs et sponte meā compōnere cūrās,

urbem Troiānam primum dulcēsque meōrum relliquiās colerem, Priamī tēcta alta manērent, et recidīva manū posuissem Pergama victīs.

Sed nunc Ītaliā magnā Grȳnēus Apollō, 345

Ītaliā Lyciae iussēre capessere sortēs;

hic amor, haec patria est. Sī tē Karthāginis arcēs

Phoenissam Libyaeque aspectus dētinet urbis, quae tandem Ausoniā Teucrōs cōnsidere terrā invidia est? Et nōs fās exera quaerere rēgna.

350

Mē patris Anchīsae, quotiēns ūmentibus umbrīs.

nox operit terrās, quotiēns astra ignea surgunt, admonet in somnīs et turbida terret imāgō;

mē puer Ascanius capitisque iniūria cārī,

quem rēgnō Hesperiae fraudō et fātālibus arvīs.

355

Nunc etiam interpres dīvum Iove missus ab ipsō

(testor utrumque caput) celerēs mandāta per aurās

dētulit: ipse deum manifestō in lūmine vīdī inrantem mūrōs vōcemque hīs auribus hausī.

Dēsine mēque tuīs incendere tēque querēlīs;

360

Ītaliā nōn sponte sequor.”

Vergil, Aeneid 6

Inter quās Phoenissa recēns ā vulnere Dīdō 450

errābat silvā in magnā; quam Trōius hērōs

ut primum iuxtā stetit agnōvitque per umbrās

obscuram, quālem primō quī surgere mēse aut videt aut vīdisse putat per nūbila lūnam, dēmisit lacrimās dulcīque adfātus amōre est 455

“Infēlīx Dīdō, vērū mihi nuntius ergō vēnerat extinctam ferrōque extrēma secūtā?

Fūneris heu tibi causa fuī? Per sīdera iūrō, per superōs et sī qua fidēs tellūre sub īmā est,

invītus, rēgīna, tuō dē lītore cessī. 460

Sed mē iussa deum, quae nunc hās ire per umbrās, per loca senta sitū cōgunt noctemque profundam, imperīis ēgēre suīs; nec crēdere quīvī hunc tantum tibi mē discessū ferre dolōrem.

Siste gradum tēque aspectū nē subtrahe nostrō. 465

Quem fugis? Extrēmum fātō quod tē adloquor hoc est.”

Tālibus Aenēās ardentem et torva tuentem lēnībat dictīs aninum lacrimāsque ciēbat.

Illa solō fīxōs oculōs āversa tenēbat nec magis inceptō vultum sermonē movētur 470

quam sī dūra silex aut stet Marpēsia cautēs.

Tandem corripuit sēsē atque inimīca refūgit

in nemus umbriferum, coniūnx ubi prīstinus illī respondet cūrīs aequatque Sychaeus amōrem.

Nec minus Aenēās cāsū concussus inīquō 475

prōsequitur lacrimīs longē et miserātur euntem.

“Hūc geminās nunc flecte aciēs, hanc aspice gentem

Rōmānōsque tuōs. Hīc Caesar et omnis Iūli

prōgeniēs magnum caelī ventūra sub axem. 790

Hīc vir, hic est, tibi quem prōmittī saepius audīs, Augustus Caesar, dīvī genus, aurea condet
saecula quī rūsus Latiō rēgnāta per arva Sāturnō quondam, super et Garamantas et Indōs prōferet imperium: iacet extrā sīdera tellūs, 795 extrā annī sōlisque viās, ubi caelifer Atlās axem umerō torquet stēllīs ārdentibus aptum.
Huius in adventum iam nunc et Caspia rēgna respōnsīs horrent dīvum et Maeōtia tellūs, et septemgeminī turbant trepida ōstia Nīlī.” 800

Excūdent aliī spīrantia mollies aera (crēdō equidem), vīvōs dūcent dē marmore vultūs ōrābunt causās melius, caelīque meātus dēscribent radiō et surgentia sīdera dīcent: 850
tū regere imperiō populōs, Rōmāne, mementō

(hae tibi erunt artēs), pācisque impōnere mōrem, parcere subiectīs et dēbellāre superbōs.”

Vergil, Aeneid 7

Rēx arva Latīnus et urbēs 45

iam senior longā placidās in pāce regēbat.

Hunc Faunō et nymphā genitum Laurente Marīcā

accipimus, Faunō Pīcus pater isque parentem tē, Sātūrne, refert, tū sanguinis ultimus auctor.

fīlius huic fātō dīvum prōlēsque virīlis 50

nūlla fuit prīmāque oriēns ērepta iuventā est.

Sōla domum et tantās servābat fīlia sēdēs,

iam mātūra virō, iam plēnīs nūbilis annīs.

Multī illam magnō ē Latiō tōtāque petēbant

Ausoniā. Petit ante aliōs pulcherrimus omnēs 55

Turnus, avīs atavīsque potēns, quem rēgia coniūnx

adiungī generum mīrō properābat amōre;

sed variīs portenta deum terrōribus obstant.

Ipse inter prīmōs praestantī corpore Turnus vertitur arma tenēns et tōtō vertice suprā est.

Cui triplicī crīnīta iubā galea alta Chimaeram

785

sustinet, Aetnaeōs efflantem faucibus ignēs:

tam magis illa fremēns et trīstibus effera flammīs,

quam magis effūsō crūdēscunt sanguine pugnae.

At lēvem clipeum sublātīs cornibus Iō

aurō īnsignībat, iam saetīs obsita, iam bōs

790

(argūmentum ingēns), et cūstōs virginis Argus

caelātāque amnem fundēns pater Īnachus urnā.

Hōs super advēnit Volscā dē gente Camilla agmen agēns equitum et flōrentēs aere catervās, bellātrīx, nōn illa colō calathīsve Minervae

805

fēmineās adsuēta manūs, sed proelia virgo

dūra patī cursūque pedum praevertēre ventōs.

Illa vel intāctae segetis per summa volāret grāmina nec tenerās cursū laessisset aristās, vel mare per medium flūctū suspēnsa tumentī

810

ferret iter celeris nec tingeret aequore plantās.

Illam omnis tēctīs agrīsque effūsa iuventūs turbaque mīrātur mātrum et prōspectat euntem, attonitīs inhiāns animīs, ut rēgius ostrō

vēlet honōs lēvēs umerōs, ut fībula crīnem

815

aurō internectat, Lyciam ut gerat ipsa pharetram et pāstōrālem praefixā cuspide myrtum.

Vergil, Aeneid 11

Vēlōcem intereā superīs in sēdibus Ōpim, ūnam ex virginibus sociīs sacrāque catervā,

compellābat et hās trīstis Lātōnia vōcēs

ōre dabat: “Graditur bellum ad crūdēle Camilla, 535

Ō virgō, et nostrīs nēquīquam cingitur armīs, cāra mihi ante aliās. Neque enim novus iste Diānae vēnit amor subitāque animum dulcēdine mōvit.

Pulsus ob invidiam rēgnō vīrēsque superbās

Prīvernō antīquā Metabus cum excēderet urbe, 540

īnfantem fugiēns media inter proelia bellī

sustulit exsiliō comitem mātrisque vocāvit nōmine Casmillae mūtātā parte Camillam.

Ipse sinū prae sē portāns iuga longa petēbat

sōlōrum nemorum. Tēla undique saeva premēbant 545 et circumfūsō volitābant mīlite Volscī.

Ecce! Fugae mediō summīs Amasēnus abundāns spūmābat rīpīs. Tantus sē nūbibus imber rūperat. Ille, innāre parāns, īnfantis amōre tardātur cārōque onerī timet. Omnia sēcum 550 versantī subitō vix haec sententia sēdit.
Tēlum immāne, manū validā quod forte gerēbat bellātor, solidum nōdīs et rōbore coctō.
Huic nātam, librō et silvestrī sūbere clausam, implicat atque habilem mediae circumligat hastae. 555
Quam dextrā ingentī librāns, ita ad aethera fātur:
‘Alma, tibi hanc, nemorum cultrīx, Lātōnia virgō, ipse pater famulam voveō. Tua prīma per aurās tēla tenēns supplex hostem fugit. Accipe, testor, dīva tuam, quae nunc dubiīs committitur aurīs.’ 560
Dīxit et adductō contortum hastīle lacertō immittit: sonuēre undae, rapidum super amnem

īnfēlīx fugit in iaculō strīdente Camilla.

At Metabus, magnā propius iam urgente catervā,

dat sēsē fluviō atque hastam cum virgine victor 565

grāmineō dōnum Triviae dē caespite vellit.

Nōn illum tēctīs ūllae, nōn moenibus urbēs accēpēre neque ipse manūs feritāte dedisset.

Pāstōrum et sōlīs exēgit montibus aevum.

Hic nātam in dūmīs interque horrentia lustra 570

armentālis equae mammīs et lacte ferīnō

nūtrībat, tenerīs immulgēns ūbera labrīs.

Utque pedum prīmīs īnfāns vestīgia plantīs

īnstiterat, iaculō palmās armāvit acūtō

spīculaue ex umerō parvae suspendit et arcum. 575

Prō crīnālī aurō, prō longae tegmine pallae

tigridis exuviae per dorsum ā vertice pendent.

Tēla manū iam tum tenerā puerīlia torsit et fundam teretī circum caput ēgit habēnā

Str̄ymoniamque gruem aut album dēiēcit olōrem. 580

Multae illam frūstrā Tyrrhēna per oppida māt̄rēs

optāvēre nurum: sōlā contenta Diānā

aeternum tēlōrum et virginitātis amōrem intemerāta colit. Vellem haud correpta fuisset mīlitiā tālī, cōnāta lacescere Teucrōs: 585

cāra mihī comitumque foret nunc ūna meārum.

Vērū age, quandōquidem fātīs urgētur acerbīs, lābere, nympha, polō fīnēsque invīse Latīnōs,

trīstis ubi īnfaustō committitur ōmine pugna

Haec cape et ultrīcem pharetrā dēprōme sagittam: 590

hāc quīcumque sacrum violārit vulnere corpus,

Trōs Italusque, mihī pariter det sanguine poenās.

Post ego nūbe cavā miserandae corpus et arma īnspoliāta feram tumultō patriaeque repōnam.”

Vergil, Aeneid 12

Iūnōnem intereā rēx omnipotentis Olympī

adloquitur fulvā pugnās dē nūbe tuentem:

“Quae iam fīnis erit, coniūnx? Quid dēnique restat?

indigetem Aenēān scīs ipsa et scīre fatēris dēbērī caelō fātisque ad sīdera tollī.

795

Quid struis? Aut quā spē gelidīs in nubibus haerēs?”

“Ventum ad suprēmum est. Terrīs agitāre vel undīs

Troiānōs potuistī, īnfandum accendere bellum, dēformāre domum et lūctū mīscēre hymenaeōs:

805

ulterius temptāre vetō.” Sīc Iuppiter orsus;

sīc dea submissō contrā Sāturnia vultū:

“Ista quidem quia nōta mihī tua, magne, voluntās,

Iuppiter, et Turnum et terrās invīta relīquī; nec tū mē āeriā sōlam nunc sēde vidērēs

810

digna indigna patī, sed flammīs cincta sub ipsā stārem aciē traheremque inimīca in proelia Teucrōs.

Et nunc cēdō equidem pugnāsque exōsa relinquō.

Illud tē, nūllā fātī quod lēge tenētur,

prō Latiō obtestor, prō maiestāte tuōrum. 820 cum iam cōnubiīs pācem fēlicibus (estō) compōnent, cum iam lēgēs et foedera iungent,

nē vetus indigenās nōmen mutāre Latīnōs

neu Trōās fierī iubeās Teucrōsque vocārī

aut vōcem mutāre virōs aut vertere vestem. 825

Sit Latium, sint Albānī per saecula rēgēs, sit Rōmāna potēns Italā virtūte propāgō:

occidit, occideritque sinās cum nōmine Trōia.”

Cūnctantī telum Aenēās fatāle coruscat, sortitus fortūnam oculīs, et corpore tōtō 920 ēminus intorquet. Mūrālī concita numquam tormentō sīc saxa fremunt nec fulmine tantī dissultant crepitūs. Volat ātrī turbinis īnstar exitium dīrum hasta ferēns ōrāsque reclūdit lōricae et clipeī extrēmōs septemplicis orbēs; 925 per medium strīdēns transit femur. Incidit ictus ingēns ad terram duplicātō pōplite Turnus.
 Consurgunt gemitū Rutulī totusque remūgit mōns circum et vōcem lātē nemora alta remittunt.
 Ille humilis supplex oculōs dextramque precantem 930
 prōtendēns “Equidem meruī nec dēprecor” inquit: “Ūtere sorte tuā. Miserī tē sī qua parentis tangere cūra potest, ōrō (fuit et tibi tālis Anchīses genitor) Daunī miserēre senectae et mē, seu corpus spoliātum lūmine māvīs, 935

redde meīs. Vīcistī et victum tendere palmās

Ausoniī vīdēre; tua est Lāvīnia coniūnx,

Ulterius nē tende odiīs.” Stetit ācer in armīs

Aenēās volvēns oculōs dextramque repressit;

Et iam iamque magis cūctantem flectere sermō 940

coeperat, īnfēlīx umerō cum apparuit altō

balteus et nōtīs fulsērunt cingula bullīs

Pallantis puerī, victum quem vulnere Turnus strāverat atque umerīs inimīcum īnsigne gerēbat.

Ille, oculīs postquam saevī monimenta dolōris 945

exuviāsque hausit, furiīs accensus et īrā

terribilis: “Tūne hinc spoliīs indūte meōrum ēripiāre mihi? Pallās tē hōc vulnere, Pallās immolat et poenam scelerātō ex sanguine sūmit.”

Hoc dīcēns ferrum adversō sub pectore condit 950

fervidus; ast illī solvuntur frīgore membra

vītaque cum gemitū fugit indignāta sub umbrās.

Summaries of AP Latin readings

Pliny's Letters

6.4

- Pliny writes to his 3rd wife, Calpurnia, who is away in Campania (the Bay of Naples) recovering from illness.
- Pliny's first two wives died, so he is very worried about Calpurnia's health.
- Pliny complains that he is stuck in Rome with work and could not join her in Campania.
- He wants her to keep him updated about her well-being and progress. He asks for 1+ letters per day.
- He is a nervous wreck at home wondering about how she is doing. The less he knows, the more he imagines.

6.7

- Pliny writes to his 3rd wife, Calpurnia, who is away in Campania (the Bay of Naples) recovering from illness.
- Calpurnia says that her one solace in Pliny's absence is reading and holding his books.
- Pliny is happy she has his comfort, and he describes how he reads her letters over and over again. They both make him feel better and make him even more upset by her absence.
- He again requests that she write him as frequently as possible.

6.16

- Pliny writes to the historian Tacitus about his uncle's response to the eruption of Mt. Vesuvius.
- Pliny the Elder, as admiral of the navy at Misenum, led a heroic mission to rescue survivors

6.20

- Pliny writes to the historian Tacitus about his and his mother's response to the eruption of Mt. Vesuvius.
- Pliny stayed home to read. They panicked until his uncle's Spanish friend snapped them out of it.
- They join a crowd of people fleeing Misenum and experience the darkness and falling ashes.

7.27

- Pliny writes to Sura (a governor and ex-consul) asking if he believes in ghosts and then tells 3 ghost stories.
- As a young man, Curtius Rufus saw a spectral figure when he got to Africa that told him he would (1) go to Rome and hold high office, (2) return to Africa as governor, and (3) die there. All of these things happened.

- There was a house in Athens that was haunted by the ghost of an old man. The family that owned it got scared off and put it on the market. The philosopher Athenodorus was curious and rented the house to investigate. The ghost led him to a spot in the courtyard, where he led authorities the next day. They dug up the spot and found bones and chains. They buried the bones, and the ghost was never seen again.
- One of Pliny's freedmen had his hair cut by a "ghost" while he slept. The same thing happened to another slave boy. Witnesses reported men in white tunics.
- Pliny takes this as a sign about his escaping prosecution by the emperor Domitian. Inside reference to how the "ghost" of Domitian still impacts those who had to work under him?
- Pliny asks Sura to argue both sides (for and against the existence of ghosts).

10.5

- Pliny asks the emperor Trajan for citizenship for his doctor Harpocras as a reward for how he treated Pliny when he was deathly ill.
- He also asks for citizenship for Hedia and Antonia Harmeris, the freedwomen of Antonia Maximilla.

10.6

- Pliny has learned that Harpocras cannot gain Roman citizenship without him first gaining Alexandrian citizenship. He asks Trajan to grant him this additional favor.

10.7

- Trajan agrees to Pliny's requests and asks for Harpocras' information so that he can make it official.

10.37

- Pliny is now the governor of the province of Bithynia in Asia Minor (modern Turkey).
- He requests 3.3 million sesterces to finish an aqueduct project for the city of Nicomedia.
- The previous administration had started the project but abandoned it.
- Pliny has done his research and assures Trajan that this project will be more successful and cost-effective.
- Pliny promises that it will serve as a monument to Trajan's rule.

10.90

- Trajan requests permission to begin construction of an aqueduct to supply the city of Sinope. He has already done the research and secured funding from the locals.

1.1-33

- Vergil introduces the subject of his epic poem
- Invocation of the Muses => the Muse begins her tale (shift of narrator from Vergil to the Muse)
- Causes of Juno's anger
 - Troy => Rome (which will destroy Carthage, her favorite city)
 - Juno supported the Greeks in the Trojan War
 - Judgment of Paris (Venus > Juno)
 - Dardanus (one of the two founders of Troy) was an illegitimate son of Jupiter (Juno's husband), and she is the goddess of marriage
 - Ganymede (a handsome young Trojan prince) was kidnapped by Jupiter and chosen to be the cup-bearer on Mt. Olympus over their daughter, Hebe.

 Juno goes to Aeolus, god of the winds and gets him to start the storm to destroy the Trojan fleet*

1.88-107

- Storm at sea
- Aeneas' first speech (wishing he had died at Troy)
- Everything looks like the end for the Trojans & their ships.

 Neptune intervenes, stops the storm, scolds Aeolus for overstepping his power, and saves the Trojan ships.*

 The Trojan ships are scattered. Aeneas and some of the ships land at the harbor at Carthage. Aeneas goes inland to scout the area. His mother, Venus appears to him, and tells him to seek help from Queen Dido of Carthage.*

1.496-512

- First appearance of Queen Dido entering the temple of Juno in Carthage
- Epic simile (Dido = Diana)
- She is giving laws and jobs to the men and women of Carthage as they build the new city
- Aeneas, hidden in a cloud of mist (by Venus), approaches and sees the rest of the Trojan refugees (that he thought had perished in the storm) approaching Dido & rejoices.

 Book 1 ends with Venus asking Cupid to shoot Dido with his arrow, making her fall in love with Aeneas*

 Book 2 is Aeneas telling Dido the story of the fall of Troy*

2.40-56

- Laocoon, Trojan priest of Neptune, runs down to scold the Trojans as they lead the Trojan Horse into the city.
- He claims that it is a scheme of the Greeks and then throws his spear at the horse.

2.201-249

- Laocoon is sacrificing a bull on the beach when twin sea snakes attack him and his two sons.
- He tries in vain to save his sons and protect himself
- Epic simile (Laocoon = sacrificial bull)
- After eating Laocoon and his sons, the snakes slither into the city and settle at the feet of the statue of Minerva (whom they saw as protector of the city of Troy, but really supported the Greeks) in her temple
- The Trojans take this all as a sign to bring the horse into the city ASAP
- They open up the walls (previously impregnable throughout 10 years of war) to make room for it
- They sing songs and decorate the city in celebration of “victory” after 10 years of war.
- Like Laocoon, Cassandra (a priestess who was gifted with the power of prophecy and then cursed to where nobody would ever believe her) tries to warn the Trojans in vain.

 The Greeks attack the city at night. The ghost of Prince Hector of Troy appears to Aeneas in a dream and tells him to save his family, take the Penates, and escape from Troy. He literally passes the torch to Aeneas.*

 Aeneas ignores this supernatural warning and goes on a rampage, killing Greeks and trying to save the city anyways. He goes to the royal palace and sees Neoptolemus/Pyrrihus kill the royal family. Aeneas almost kills Helen himself until Venus steps in and reminds him to save his family and escape.*

 Creusa, Aeneas' wife, gets lost as they escape the city. He goes back to look for her. Her ghost appears to him and tells him to go on.*

 Book 3 is Aeneas continuing the story of his adventures to Dido. He tells her all about everything that happened to them at sea in his seven years journey between Troy and Carthage.*

4.74-89

- Dido leads Aeneas through the construction of the city of Carthage. She invites him to banquets every night and asks him to retell his adventures. She cannot sleep or stop thinking about him when he is absent. She fawns over Ascanius because he reminds her of Aeneas.
- Dido begins to neglect her duties as queen. The progress on the city slows to a halt.

Juno & Venus come up with a scheme to orchestrate a “marriage” between Dido & Aeneas*

4.165-197

- Dido and Aeneas take refuge in a cave to escape a storm that arises while they are out hunting
- “cosmic wedding” scene in the cave. They hook up. Dido assumes they are married. Aeneas doesn’t.
- Beginning of the end for Dido. She now openly calls it love and marriage and neglects her reputation.
- Fama/Rumor spreads the news throughout Africa. Description of the horrible goddess and her powers.
- The news spreads to King Iarbas, a suitor for Dido who gifted her the land of Carthage when she arrived as a refugee from Tyre.

 Iarbas plays to Jupiter to help. Jupiter hears his prayer and sends Mercury to Aeneas. Aeneas is thunderstruck by the divine message (Remember your gods/country/family. Leave Carthage and head to Italy.).*

 Aeneas begins preparations to leave Carthage. He plans on telling Dido, but she hears (Rumor/Fama is effective) first and confronts him.*

4.305-361

- Dido’s first speech to Aeneas
 - She accuses Aeneas of trying to deceive her and leave Carthage without telling her.
 - She asks if nothing about their relationship was meaningful enough to hold him there.
 - She questions his reasons for leaving. She throws a pity party for herself and then begs him to stay.
 - She wishes she and Aeneas had a child together so she would have something of him after he leaves.
- Aeneas’ speech to Dido
- Aeneas pauses to collect his thought and suppress his emotions after Dido’s speech.
- He promises that he did not mean to deceive her and cherished their time together, and then he gives pious reasons for his departure: they never got married, the gods ordered him to, he has a nation to preserve (Troy) and a nation to found (Rome), and he owes it to his family to follow his destiny. He assures her that he does not want to leave; he has to leave.

 Dido sends her sister, Anna, to plead with Aeneas on her behalf. When that doesn’t work, she has Anna help her pile up all of Aeneas’ belonging and everything that reminds her of him onto a pyre. Anna thinks she is helping, but Dido is planning her suicide. Before falling on Aeneas’ sword (a Roman general’s death), she curses Aeneas, Troy, and Rome for all eternity, foretelling the Punic Wars between Rome & Carthage.*

 Aeneas sees a fire in the palace as he sails away, but does not know what it means.*

 Aeneas stops in Sicily when he realizes it is the one-year anniversary of his father’s death. He hosts elaborate funeral games in Anchises’ honor. From this point on, he is pater Aeneas.*

 The ghost of Anchises tells Aeneas to visit him in the Underworld.*

 Aeneas goes to Cumae and meets the Sibyl (a priestess/prophetess), who guides him to/through the Underworld. He crosses the River Styx, learns about the fate of unburied souls, and gets past the three-headed guard dog, Cerberus, by throwing it a drugged honey cake. She continues to guide him through the various regions of the Underworld: the suicides, Tartarus (where the souls of sinners are punished), and Elysian Fields (where the souls of heroes roam in paradise)*

6.450-476

- Aeneas encounters the ghost of Dido among the suicides
- Aeneas immediately recognizes her despite the difficulties (darkness, transparency, crowd of ghosts)
- Epic simile (Dido = moon seen through the trees)
- Aeneas tries to talk to her, repeating the same lame arguments from his speech in Book 4
- Dido refuses to look at him or talk to him, instead retreating to the ghost of her husband, Sychaeus, who matches her grief and love.
- Aeneas follows her, crying, and pities her situation. He finally realizes the impact of his decisions.

 Aeneas meets up with Anchises in the Elysian Fields. Anchises introduces him to the souls of all of the awesome Romans who will be born in the future.*

 Epic catalogue: parade of future Romans*

6.788-800

- Anchises describes Augustus Caesar and how he will be the fulfillment of the Roman destiny
- straight-up political propaganda to appease Vergil's patron

6.847-854

- Anchises

finishes up describing how the Romans will surpass the Greeks in various fields of study (bronze & marble sculpture, oratory, and astronomy).

- Anchises gives Aeneas his/Rome's divine mission: "You, O Roman, remember to

- | | |
|------------------------------------|------------------------|
| (1) rule the people in/with empire | (3) spare the defeated |
| (2) impose a pattern of peace | (4) war down the proud |

 Anchises goes on to explain the process of reincarnation to Aeneas, who returns from his heroic*

katabasis with a new, supernatural understanding of the world and his place in it.

 Aeneas and his men continue to Italy, where they eventually land at the city of Lavinium in Latium. Latinus, the King of Lavinium & the Latins, welcomes Aeneas and his men. After a positive sign/omen from the gods, he offers Aeneas the hand of his daughter, Lavinia, in marriage to seal an alliance between their peoples.*

 Juno sends Allecto, one of the Furies, to stir up trouble in Latium. Allecto drives Amata (Latinus' wife and Lavinia's mother) and Turnus (the prince of the Rutulians, who was a suitor for Lavinia before Aeneas' arrival) mad. A war breaks out between the Rutulians (+ their Italian allies) and the Trojans (+ the Latins).*

7.45-58

- Vergil describes the situation in Lavinium before Aeneas' arrival. Latinus (the grandson of Saturn) is older, has ruled in peace for long years, but he has no male heir. Whoever marries Lavinia will inherit the kingship.

- Lavinia is now old enough to be married, very beautiful, and the most sought-after bachelorette in Italy.

- Among the men seeking her hand is Turnus, who is described as "most handsome." Amata supported a marriage between Lavinia and Turnus before Aeneas' arrival.

 Preparations for the war are now in full preparation.*

 Epic catalogue: list of all of the Italian leaders fighting against Aeneas and his allies.*

7.783-792

- Vergil describes Turnus' elaborate armor.

- He has a three-headed chimera helmet that breathes fire (a terrifying monster).

- His shield tells the full story of Io (his ancestor and another victim of Juno's intervention).

7.803-817

- Vergil describes Camilla, leader of the Volscians. She defies all expectations for ancient women. She is the co-commander of the armies and the equal of Turnus. She is a leader and a warrior-woman famous for her swiftness. All of the locals come out to see this miraculous woman pass by with her troops.

 The battle is progressing towards a final resolution. As Camilla leads her troops towards her fated death, the goddess Diana watches from Mt. Olypmus.*

11.532-594

- Diana laments to her nymph, Opis, that there is nothing she can do to prevent Camilla's death.
- She proceeds to tell Opis Camilla's backstory to explain why she loves this mortal so much.
- Camilla's father, Metabus, was the King of the Etruscans until he was expelled by his people.
- He took his infant daughter into exile with him after her mother died in childbirth.
- Fleeing from the Etruscans and the Volscians alike, Metabus sought safety in the solitude of the woody hills.
- While being chased by enemies, he encountered a river. Faced with an impossible situation, he tied Camilla to a spear, prayed to Diana (promising that he would dedicate his daughter to her service if she just protected the girl), threw the spear across the river, and followed through on his promise.
- As soon as she could walk, he trained her to be a hunter and a warrior, teaching her the weapons and skills of Diana (spear, bow & arrow, sling, hunting).
- Diana acknowledges that it is Camilla's decisions and Fate that are leading to her death. Unlike Juno, she does not try to change Fate. Instead she tells Opis to take an arrow, go down to Earth, and kill whoever kills Camilla in battle. Diana promises to take her body (unplundered by the enemy) back to her homeland and bury it to honor her favorite mortal.

 Turnus & Aeneas agree to a winner-takes-all duel to settle the war with minimum bloodshed after three books of slaughter between the two sides.*

 Juno continues to interfere.*

 Queen Amata realizes the consequences of her madness and hangs herself in despair.*

 Juno & Jupiter meet on Mt. Olympus to settle the matter once and for all.*

12.791-812

- Jupiter asks Juno what she is hoping to achieve by all of her meddling against Fate.
- He finally lays down the law and forbids her from interfering any further in the conflict.
- Juno reluctantly agrees, but expresses her displeasure in the situation.

12.818-828

- Juno makes one final request of Jupiter: let the Trojan name and culture die; let the Trojans become fully assimilated into Latin culture so that this name/nation that is so hated by her will cease to exist.

 Jupiter agrees to this condition. Juno ceases to interfere.*

 Turnus & Aeneas begin to duel. Turnus breaks his sword on Aeneas' shield (which was made for him by Vulcan at the request of Venus) throws a massive boulder at Aeneas & misses.*

12.919-929

- Aeneas hesitates, picking out an opportunity to attack before hurling his spear at Turnus with deadly force.
- Epic simile (spear = catapult, thunderbolt, tornado)
- The spear pierces Turnus' shield, armor, and thigh. He collapses to the ground.
- Turnus humbly admits defeat and begs for consideration of the rules of war: take my arms & armor as spoils but leave my body for my family to bury.
- Aeneas (who has seen the consequences of burial in the Underworld and been specifically instructed to spare the defeated) should listen to this advice. He stays his hand and is considering it until...
- He sees Turnus is still wearing the baldric (i.e. sword belt) of Pallas, his friend whom Turnus killed in battle.
- Overcome with rage, Aeneas kills Turnus as vengeance for Pallas.
- Thus ends the epic poem.

Scanning Latin poetry

- All Greek and Latin poetry was meant to be sung along with accompanying music
- "Scanning" poetry is the process of identifying the meter of the poetry to read/sing it properly
 - o Meter = a regularly-recurring rhythm
- Greek & Latin poetry is quantitative (long vs. short syllables), not qualitative (accented vs. unaccented syllables)
- Syllables can either be long by nature or long by position
 - o A syllable is long by nature if it contains either a long vowel (w/ macron) or a diphthong (two short vowels that go together and function as one long vowel)
 - Diphthongs: ae, au, ei, eu, oi, ui
 - Examples: siccā, aeris
 - o A syllable is long by position if a short vowel is followed by 2 or more consonants
 - Examples: mortis, altum
- Three things to remember if you run into a problem scanning Latin poetry:
 - o Ignore spaces in between words.
 - There were no spaces between words in the original Latin texts.
 - A short vowel at the end of a word can still be a long syllable if there are 2+ consonants between it and the next vowel.
 - o A stop (a hard consonant sound: B, C, D, F, G, K, P, or T) plus a liquid (a soft consonant sound: L or R) can count as either one or two consonants.
 - This 1.5 consonant rule allows for flexibility in meter. Go with whichever fits the meter.
 - o Elision: In Latin poetry, when one word ends with a vowel and the next word starts with a vowel, they blend the two words together by skipping over the first vowel.
 - We mark elisions in the text by crossing out the first vowel sound and drawing a tie (like in sheet music) between the two words.
 - Note: an H at the beginning of a word and an M at the end of the word were treated as silent consonants.
 - Examples: puella agit puellam amō ā harenā
- Types of feet used in Latin poetry:
 - o Dactyl = long, short, short (— ∪ ∪)
 - o Iamb = short, long (∪ —)
 - o Spondee = long, long (— —)
 - o Trochee = long, short (— ∪)
- Dactylic hexameter (the meter of epic poetry)
 - o Six feet, base foot = dactyl, first 4 feet are either a spondee or a dactyl, 5th foot is always a dactyl, 6th foot is either a spondee or a trochee

— ∪ ∪ / — ∪ ∪ / — ∪ ∪ / — ∪ ∪ / — ∪ ∪ / — ∪

LATIN STYLISTIC DEVICES

1. Alliteration - deliberate repetition of consonant sounds at the beginning of a series of words (Peter Piper picked a peck of pickled peppers.)
2. Anaphora - deliberate repetition of a word or words for emphasis, especially at the beginning of successive clauses (Blessed are the _____ for they shall _____. x8)
3. Antithesis – setting two contradictory words/ideas/phrases “against” each other (nōn ad dēpōnendam sed ad cōfirmandam audāciam) (cum quiescent, probant)
4. Apostrophe - direct address of some person or thing not present, usually for emotional effect (Goodnight, moon.)
5. Assonance - deliberate repetition of consonant sounds in the middle and/or at the end of a series of words (Go slow over the road.)
6. Asyndeton –deliberate omission of conjunctions (But in a larger sense, we cannot dedicate, we cannot consecrate, we cannot hallow this ground)
7. Chiasmus - an ABBA arrangement of words, often used with pairs of nouns and adjectives (tantīs reī publicae periculīs)
8. Correlatives – Conjunctions or adverbs that are used in pairs
 - i. Aut ... aut ... - “either ... or ...”
 - ii. Cum ... tum ... - “when ... then ...”
 - iii. Et ... et ... - “both ... and ...”
 - iv. Non ... sed ... - “not ... but ...”
 - v. Non solum/modo ... sed etiam ... - “not only ... but also ...”
 - vi. Seu ... sive ... - “whether ... or ...”
 - vii. Tam ... quam ... - “as ... as ...”
 - viii. Tot ... quot ... - “as many ... as ...”
9. Ellipsis - deliberate omission of words easily understood in context (She is enrolled in Latin; he in Spanish.)
10. Enjambment – purposefully delaying an important word or phrase (most often the verb) until the start of the next line of poetry for dramatic effect
11. Hendiadys - expressing a single idea with two nouns joined by a conjunction instead of one noun and a modifier (A et B = “an Aish B”) (nice and cool = “nicely cool”) (Mors ac poena reī publicae - “death & the penalty of the Republic” => the death penalty)
12. Hyperbaton – deliberately mixed up word order in a passage to show confusion or chaos
13. Hyperbole – deliberate exaggeration for effect
14. Interlocked word order - an ABAB arrangement of words, often used with pairs of nouns and adjectives (tantīs reī periculīs publicae)
15. Litotes - use of a double negative instead of a positive for nuance or stylistic effect (“She is not a bad singer”) (“Not nobody does that.”)

16. Metaphor – a comparison between two unlike things (What light through yonder window breaks. It is the East, and Juliet is the sun!)
17. Metonymy - the use of a word closely related to the word, rather than the word itself (He is the quarterback of the basketball team)
18. Personification - attribution of human characteristics to something not human (Mother nature cares for us all.)
19. Polysyndeton –deliberately excessive use of conjunction (I like apples and bananas and grapes and lemons.)
20. Praeteritio – Mentioning something by saying you won't talk about it (praetereō = “I pass over”)
21. Rhetorical question - a question asked in order to create a dramatic effect or to make a point rather than to get an answer. (How could anyone possibly enjoy that movie?)
22. Simile – a comparison between two unlike things using the words “like” or “as” (Just as the sands in the hourglass, so are the days of our lives.)
23. Synecdoche - the use of the part to express the whole, a type of metonymy (I got a new set of wheels today.) (wheels = car)
24. Transferred epithet - application of an adjective to one noun when it logically applies to another (Throw your mistempered weapons to the ground)
25. Tricolon - a series of three phrases/clauses (Some are born great; some achieve greatness; and some have greatness thrust upon them.)
26. Word picture - a type of imagery in which the words of a phrase are arranged in an order that visually suggests the image or idea being described

Latin Noun Endings

	1st (f.)	2nd (m.)	2nd (n.)	3rd (m./f.)	3rd (n.)	4th (m./f.)	4th (n.)	5th (m./f.)
Nominative singular	a	us	um	-	-	us	ū	ēs
Genitive singular	ae	ī	ī	is	is	ūs	ūs	eī
Dative singular	ae	ō	ō	ī	ī	uī	ū	eī
Accusative singular	am	um	um	em	-	um	ū	em
Ablative singular	ā	ō	ō	e	e	ū	ū	ē
Nominative plural	ae	ī	a	ēs	a	ūs	ua	ēs
Genitive plural	ārum	ōrum	ōrum	um	um	uum	uum	ērum
Dative plural	īs	īs	īs	ibus	ibus	ibus	ibus	ēbus
Accusative plural	ās	ōs	a	ēs	a	ūs	ua	ēs
Ablative plural	īs	īs	īs	ibus	ibus	ibus	ibus	ēbus

Common Case Uses (Summary)

- Nominative: subject, predicate nominative
- Genitive: modifying another noun (“of”)
- Dative: indirect object (“to”), reference (“to, for”), possession (“for”), purpose (“for”), object of compound/intransitive verbs
- Accusative: direct object of an active verb, object of a preposition, duration of time (“for”), place to which (“to”), subject of an indirect statement clause
- Ablative: Object of (sometimes implied) preposition, means (“with, by [an object]”), manner (“with [an idea/feeling]”), accompaniment (“with [a person]”), time when (“in, at”), place where (“in, at”), agent of a passive verb (“by [a person]”), ablative absolute, place from which/separation (“from”), comparison (“than”), degree of difference (“by”), object of certain deponent verbs, respect/specification (“at, in, with regard to”)
- Vocative: direct address (“O!”)
- Locative: place where (“in, at”)

Latin Adjective Endings

	1st (f.)	2nd (m.)	2nd (n.)	3rd (m./f.)	3rd (n.)
Nominative singular	a	us	um	-	-
Genitive singular	ae	ī	ī	is	is
Dative singular	ae	ō	ō	ī	ī
Accusative singular	am	um	um	em	-
Ablative singular	ā	ō	ō	ī	ī
Nominative plural	ae	ī	a	ēs	ia
Genitive plural	ārum	ōrum	ōrum	ium	ium
Dative plural	īs	īs	īs	ibus	ibus
Accusative plural	ās	ōs	a	ēs	ia
Ablative plural	īs	īs	īs	ibus	ibus

Degrees of Adjectives

Degree	Masculine	Feminine	Neuter	English
Positive	Altus	Alta	Altum	“tall”
Comparative	Altior	Altior	Altius	“taller, very tall”
Superlative	Altissimus	Altissima	Altissimum	“tallest; extremely tall”

Note: if the nominative singular of an adjective in the positive degree ends in -lis or -er, then the superlative degree of that adjective is shortened to -llimus/a/um or -errimus/a/um.

ex: crudelis (positive), crudelior (comparative), crudellimus (superlative)

ex: acer (positive), acrior (comparative), acerrimus (superlative) quam + comparative = “than”

quam + superlative = “as _____ as possible”

Formation of Latin Adverbs

- Many 1st and 2nd declension adjectives form positive degree adverbs by adding –ē to the base.
- 3rd declension adjectives form positive degree adverbs by adding –iter to the base. If the base of the adjective ends in –nt–, then only –er is added to create the adverb.

Positive degree ADJ	Positive degree ADV	Comparative ADV	Superlative ADV
Longus/a/um	Longē	Longius	longissimē
Līberus/a/um	Līberē	Līberius	līberrimē
Pulcher/pulchra/pulchrum	Pulchrē	Pulchrius	pulcherrimē
Fortis, forte	Fortiter	Fortius	fortissimē
Celer, celeris, celere	Celeriter	Celerius	celerrimē
Sapiēns, sapientis	Sapienter	Sapientius	Sapientissimē
Fēlix, fēlicis	Fēliciter	Fēlicius	fēlicissimē

Personal Pronoun Forms

	1st person	2nd person	3rd person (m.)	3rd person (f.)	3rd person (n.)
	I/me	You	He/his/him	She/her	it nominative singular	ego	tū	is	ea	id
genitive singular	meī	tuī	eius	eius	eius
dative singular	mihi	tibi	eī	eī	eī
accusative singular	mē	tē	eum	eam	id
ablative singular	mē	tē	eō	eā	eō
	We/us	Y'all	They/their/them	They/their/them	They/their/them
nominative plural	nōs	vōs	eī	eae	ea
genitive plural	nōstrum/nōstrī	vestrum/vestrī	eōrum	eārum	eōrum
dative plural	nōbis	vōbis	eīs	eīs	eīs
accusative plural	nōs	vōs	eōs	eās	ea
ablative plural	nōbis	vōbis	eīs	eīs	eīs

Demonstrative Pronoun Forms

	This (m.)	This (f.)	This (n.)		That (m.)	That (f.)	That (n.)
nominative singular	hic	haec	hoc		ille	illa	illud
genitive singular	huius	huius	huius		illīus	illīus	illīus
dative singular	huic	huic	huic		illī	illī	illī
accusative singular	hunc	hanc	hoc		illum	illam	illud
ablative singular	hōc	hāc	hōc		illō	ilā	illō
	These (m.)	These (f.)	These (n.)		Those (m.)	Those (f.)	Those (n.)
nominative plural	hī	hae	haec		illī	illae	illa
genitive plural	hōrum	hārum	hōrum		illōrum	illārum	illōrum
dative plural	hīs	hīs	hīs		illīs	illīs	illīs
accusative plural	hōs	hās	haec		illōs	illās	illa
ablative plural	hīs	hīs	hīs		illīs	illīs	illīs

Relative & Interrogative Pronoun Forms

	m.	f.	n.		m./f.	n.
nominative singular	quī	quae	quod		quis	quid
genitive singular	cuius	cuius	cuius		cuius	cuius
dative singular	cui	cui	cui		cui	cui
accusative singular	quem	quam	quod		quem	quid
ablative singular	quō	quā	quō		quō	quō
nominative plural	quī	quae	quae		quī	quae
genitive plural	quōrum	quārum	quōrum		quorum	quōrum
dative plural	quibus	quibus	quibus		quibus	quibus
accusative plural	quōs	quās	quae		quōs	quae
ablative plural	quibus	quibus	quibus		quibus	quibus

Indefinite Adjectives & Pronouns

- Aliquis, aliquis, aliquid – someone, anyone (pronoun); some, any (adjective)
- Quīdam, quaedam, quoddam – a certain one (pronoun); a certain (adjective)
- Quisquam, quisquam, quidquam - each one (pronoun); each (adjective)
- Quisque, quisque, quidque - anyone, anything (pronoun); any (adjective)
- Quisquis, quisquis, quidquid – whoever, whatever (pronoun); whatever, any (adjective)

Latin Verbs

The main verb is the most important word in a clause. It is the most identifiable word in the clause & helps identify the subject and its action or state of being. When you see a dictionary entry for a verb, you will see 4 similar-looking words. These are the principal parts of that verb. They tell you all the possible forms that verb can take. There are 4 conjugations, or “patterns” of verb endings in Latin.

- The stem of a verb shows what is happening in the sentence; the ending shows who/what it is doing it.
- A Latin verb MUST agree with its subject in person & number.

English pronouns endings (passive)

Latin verb endings (active)

Latin verb

	Singular	Plural
1st person	I	We
2nd person	You	Y'all
3rd person	He/she/it	They

	Singular	Plural
1st person	-ō/m	-mus
2nd person	-s	-tis
3rd person	-t	-nt

	Singular	Plural
1st person	-r	-mur
2nd person	-ris	-mini
3rd person	-tur	-ntur

Which principal part do you use?

Tenses	Active voice	Passive voice
Present, Imperfect, & Future	2 nd principal part	2 nd principal part
Perfect, Pluperfect, & Future perfect	3 rd principal part	4 th principal part

Verb Synopses (to help you review verb forms)

- Verb: cenō, cenāre, cenāvī, cenātus/a/um (1)
- Person, number, & gender of subject: 3rd singular masculine

	Active indicative	Passive indicative	Active subjunctive	Passive subjunctive
Present	Cenat	Cenātur	Cenet	cenētur
Imperfect	Cenābat	Cenābātur	Cenāret	Cenārētur
Future	Cenābit	Cenābitur	x	x
Perfect	Cenāvit	Cenātus est	Cenāverit	Cenātus sit
Pluperfect	Cenāverat	Cenātus erat	Cenāvisset	Cenātus esset
Future Perfect	Cenāverit	Cenātus erit	x	x

- Verb: audiō, audīre, audīvī, audītus/a/um (4)
- Person, number, & gender of subject: 1st plural feminine

	Active indicative	Passive indicative	Active subjunctive	Passive subjunctive
Present	Audīmus	Audīmur	Audiāmus	Audiāmur
Imperfect	Audiēbāmus	Audiēbāmur	Audīrēmus	Audīrēmur
Future	Audiēmus	Audiēmur	x	x
Perfect	Audīvimus	Audītae sumus	Audīverimus	Audītae simus
Pluperfect	Audīveramus	Audītae eramus	Audīvissēmus	Audītae essēmus
Future Perfect	Audīverimus	Audītae erimus	x	x

Indicative Active Verb Forms

Tense	Stem	Ending	Translation
Present	2 nd principal part minus last 3 letters	(1) –ō/ās/at/āmus/ātis/ant (2) –eō/ēs/et/ēmus/ētis/ent (3) –ō/is/it/imus/itis/unt (3-iō) –iō/is/it/imus/itis/iunt (4) –iō/īs/it/īmus/ītis/iunt	“[verb]s” “is/are [verb]ing”
Imperfect	2 nd principal part minus last 3 letters	(1) –ābam/ābās/ābat/ābāmus/ābātis/ābant (2)(3) –ēbam/ēbās/ēbat/ēbāmus/ēbātis/ēbant (3-iō)(4) –iēbam/iēbās/iēbat/iēbāmus/iēbātis/iēbant	“was [verb]ing” “used to [verb]”
Future	2 nd principal part minus last 3 letters	(1) –ābō/ābis/ābit/ābimus/ābitis/ābunt (2) –ēbō/ēbis/ēbit/ēbimus/ēbitis/ēbunt (3) –am/ēs/et/ēmus/ētis/ent (3-iō)(4) –iam/iēs/iet/iēmus/iētis/ient	“will [verb]”
Perfect	3 rd principal part minus the –ī	–ī/istī/it/īmus/istīs/ērunt	“[verb]ed” “has/have [verb]ed”
Pluperfect	3 rd principal part minus the –ī	–eram/erās/erat/erāmus/erātis/erant	“had [already] [verb]ed”
Future Perfect	3 rd principal part minus the –ī	–erō/eris/erit/erimus/eritis/erint	“will have [verb]ed”

Latin Verb Tense Timeline

The arrangement of Latin verb tenses looks like this.

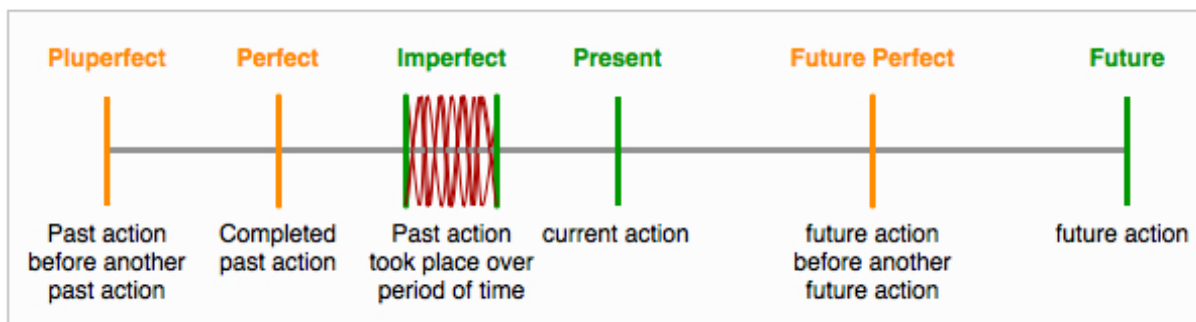

Indicative Passive Verb Forms

Tense	Stem	Ending	Translation
Present	2 nd principal part minus last 3 letters	(1) –or/āris/ātur/āmur/āminī/antur (2) –eor/ēris/ētur/ēmur/ēminī/entur (3) –or/eris/itur/imur/iminī/untur (3-iō) –ior/ieris/itur/imur/iminī/iuntur (4) –ior/ieris/itur/imur/iminī/iuntur	“is [verb]ed” “is/are being [verb]ed”
Imperfect	2 nd principal part minus last 3 letters	(1) –ābar/ābāris/ābātur/ābāmur/ābāminī/ābantur (2)(3) –ēbar/ēbāris/ēbātur/ēbāmur/ēbāminī/ēbantur (3-iō)(4) –iēbar/iēbāris/iēbātur/iēbāmur/iēbāminī/iēbantur	“was being [verb]ed” “used to be [verb]ed”
Future	2 nd principal part minus last 3 letters	(2) –ābor/āberis/ābitur/ābimur/ābiminī/ābuntur (2) –ēbor/ēberis/ēbitur/ēbimur/ēbiminī/ēbuntur (3) –ar/ēris/ētur/ēmur/ēminī/entur (3-iō)(4) –iar/iēris/iētur/iēmur/iēminī/ientur	“will be [verb]ed”
Perfect	4 th principal part	sum/es/est/sumus/estis/sunt	Was “[verb]ed” “has/have been [verb]ed”
Pluperfect	4 th principal part	eram/erās/erat/erāmus/erātis/erant	“had [already] been [verb]ed”
Future Perfect	4 th principal part	erō/eris/erit/erimus/eritis/erunt	“will have been [verb]ed”

Latin Verb Tense Timeline

The arrangement of Latin verb tenses looks like this.

Subjunctive Verb Forms

Tense/Mood/Voice	Stem	Ending	Example
Present Subjunctive	2 nd Principal Part (minus the last 3 letters)	Change of vowel depending on conjugation (We f ear a l iar) + m/s/t/mus/tis/nt (active) r/ris/tur/mur/minī/ntur (passive)	Cenet Agātur
Imperfect Subjunctive	Entire 2 nd Principal Part	m/s/t/mus/tis/nt (active) r/ris/tur/mur/minī/ntur (passive)	Cenārem Facerētur
Perfect Active Subjunctive	3 rd Principal Part (minus the –ī)	erim/eris/erit/ erimus/eritis/erint	Necāveris
Pluperfect Active Subjunctive	3 rd Principal Part (minus the –ī)	īssēm/īssēs/īssēt/ īssēmus/īssētis/īssent	Dixīssēt
Perfect Passive Subjunctive	4 th Principal Part	sim/sis/sit/ simus/sitis/sint	Cenāta sint
Pluperfect Passive Subjunctive	4 th Principal Part	essem/essēs/esset/ essēmus/essētis/essent	Actum esset

Common Uses of the Subjunctive Mood (Summary)

Subjunctive use	Type of clause	Introductory “hint” words	Translation
Jussive	Independent	n/a (positive) nē (negative)	“should, let, may...”
Conditional	Dependent/ subordinate	sī ... , [tum] ... nīsī , [tum] ...	“if ... , then ...” “if not / unless ... , then ...”
Cum Clause	Dependent/ subordinate	cum	“when(ever)” (circumstantial) “since, because” (causal) “although” (concessive)
Indirect Command	Dependent/ subordinate	verb of commanding/urging + ut (+) verb of commanding/urging + nē (-)	“that..., to...” (+) “that ... not, not to...” (-)
Indirect Question	Dependent/ subordinate	question word at start of clause (quis, quid, cur, ubi , etc.)	No special translation
Purpose Clause	Dependent/ subordinate	ut (+) nē (-)	“so that..., In order that..., to...” (+) “lest, in order that ... not, to not...” (-)
Relative Clause of Characteristic	Dependent/ subordinate	relative clause w/ a subjunctive verb	“the type of person who would ...” “the type of thing which does...”
Result Clause	Dependent/ subordinate	tam/ita/sīc/tantus ... ut (+) tam/ita/sīc/tantus ... ut nōn (-)	“so ... that ...” “so ... that not ...”

Common Latin Grammar Review

- Participles

- A participle = a verbal adjective
- Present active participle (ex: amāns, amantis = “loving”)
- Perfect passive participle (ex: amātus/a/um = “having been loved”)
- Future active participle (ex: amātūrus/a/um = “about to love”)
- Future passive participle (ex: amandus/a/um = “about to be loved”)
 - The FPP is usually called a gerund or gerundive, depending on how it is being used.
 - Gerund = verbal noun. Gerundive = verbal adjective
 -

- Infinitives

- An infinitive = a verbal noun
- Infinitive forms (see chart)

	Active	Passive
Present	Amāre	Amārī
Perfect	Amāvisse	Amātum esse
Future	Amātūrum esse	Amātum īrī

- Deponent verbs

- A deponent verb is a verb that is passive in form, but active in meaning.
- A deponent verb always looks passive but always translates active.
- You can tell that a verb is deponent by its principal parts.
 - Amō, amāre, amāvī, amātum (1) = regular
 - Hortor, hortārī, hortātus sum (1) = deponent

- Ablative absolute (further explanation in “Latin case uses” PDF)

- A participial phrase separated off from the rest of the sentence that describes the circumstances under which the main action takes place.
- With a P.A.P. (populō gaudente = “with the people rejoicing”)
- With a P.P.P. (Rōmā vīsā = “with Rome having been seen”)
- With no participle (Caesāre dūce = “with Caesar [being] leader”)

- Conditionals

- Sī ... tum ... = “If ... then ...”
- Nisi ... tum ... = “Unless/If not ... then ...”
- Indicative conditional = likely/realistic
- Subjunctive conditional = hypothetical/theoretical

- Double dative
 - Dative of reference + dative of purpose
 - Id munerī tibi emī. = “I bought it as a gift (purpose) for you (reference).”

- Gerunds & gerundives
 - FPP on its own = gerund or gerundive (both of which require a special translation)
 - Gerund = verbal noun vs. Gerundive = verbal adjective
 - Studium legendī librōs habēmus. (gerund) = “We have a great love of reading.”
 - Studium legendōrum librōrum habēmus. (gerundive) = “We have a great love of books to be read.” => “We have a great love of reading books.”
 - Discimus legendō. (gerund) = “We learn by reading.”
 - Discimus legendīs librīs. (gerundive) = “We learn by books to be read.” => “We learn by reading books.”

- Indirect statement (further explanation in “Latin case uses” PDF)
 - Head verb of saying/knowing/thinking/etc + [accusative subject + infinitive verb]
 - Egō putō [Latīnam esse optimam]. = “I think that Latin is the best.”
 - Remember: The tense of the infinitive in indirect statement is relative to the tense of the main verb.
 - Present = same time as the main verb
 - Perfect = before the action of the main verb
 - Future = after the action of the main verb

- Passive periphrastic
 - FPP + sum, esse = passive periphrastic, which implies necessity/requirement/obligation
 - Usually accompanied by a dative of agent (not an ablative of agent, like with passive verbs)
 - Villa nobis purgandum est. = “The villa must be cleaned by us.”

Latin Case Uses

Nominative

- Subject

- Definition: The subject of a sentence is the word that is the agent performing the action of an active verb or the recipient of the action of a passive verb.
- Recognition: The subject is usually towards the beginning of the sentence and always agrees with the main verb in person and number.
- Examples:
 - Vir ursum necavit. = “The man killed the bear.”
 - Vir ab ursō necātus est. = “The man was killed by the bear.”

- Predicate nominative

- Definition: A predicate nominative is a noun or adjective in the predicate of the sentence that modifies the subject of the sentence.
- Recognition: The predicate nominative construction only appears along with an intransitive verb (i.e. a verb of being rather than an action verb).
- Examples:
 - Publius est agricola. = “Publius is a farmer.”
 - Cornelia erat beata. = “Cornelia was pretty.”

Genitive

- Modifying nouns to show possession

- Definition: A noun that is used to limit or define another noun is put in the genitive case.
- Translation: The relationship between the two nouns is most often expressed in English by inserting the preposition “of” before the noun in the genitive.
- Examples:
 - Canis Aurēliae = “the dog of Aurelia” = “Aurelia’s dog”

- Genitive of the whole/Partitive genitive

- Definition: The genitive case is used to show the whole of some group or thing after another word is used to show a part of that whole.
- Recognition: The genitive of the whole can be used after neuter nouns or after certain pronouns and adjectives (aliquid, quid, multum, plūs, minus, satis, nihil, tantum, quantum, etc.). The genitive of the whole can also be used after mīlia to show multiple thousands of something.
- Translation: Translation of the genitive of the whole depends on the context.
- Examples:
 - Pars Urbis = “a part of the city”
 - Nihil temporis = “nothing of time” = “no time”
 - Quid novī = “what of new (business)” = “what (is) new”
 - Satis eloquentiae = “enough of eloquence” = “sufficient eloquence”
 - Decem mīlia virōrum = “10,000 of men” = “10,000 men”

- Objective genitive

- Definition: The objective genitive is used with nouns of action, agency, or feelings to show the object of this action/agency/feeling rather than to modify the non-genitive noun.

- Recognition: Objective genitives must be recognized by context, because they can often look the exact same as subjective genitive constructions.
- Translation: You must be careful of how you use possessive contractions and the preposition “of” in translations in order to clearly differentiate subjective vs. objective genitives.
- Examples:
 - (Subjective genitive) Amōr fēminae = “a woman’s love” = “the love belonging to a woman” = “the love a woman has for a man”
 - (Objective genitive) Amōr fēminae = “love of a woman” = “the love a man has for a woman”
 - (Subjective genitive) Odium Caesāris = “Caesar’s hatred” = “Caesar’s hatred for someone else”
 - (Objective genitive) Odium Caesāris = “hatred of Caesar” = “someone else’s hatred of Caesar”
- Genitive of description/quality/value
 - Definition: The genitive case is often used in Latin to show the quality, value, or price of an object. It can also be used with numerals to define measurements of depth, length, height, etc.
 - Translation: The English preposition “of” can be used most of the time, but sometimes noun in the genitive is best translated as an adjective.
 - Examples:
 - Vir magnae virtūtis = “a man of great virtue” = “a very virtuous man”
 - Margarita magnī pretiī = “a pearl of great price” = “an expensive pearl”
 - Nōn habeo assis Marsum augurem. = “I don’t care a bit for an augur of Mars.” = “I don’t value the words/judgment of a Martian augur at more than a single copper coin (the Roman equivalent of a penny.)”
 - Murus sēdecim pedum = “a wall of 16 feet (in height)”
- Genitive of material
 - Definition: The genitive case can be used to show the substance or material out of which a thing is made/constructed
 - Translation: Either use the English preposition “of” or change the genitive noun into an equivalent adjective.
 - Examples:
 - Statua aeris = “a statue (made) of bronze” = “a bronze statue”
- Genitive with certain verbs (verbs of memory and forgetting, verbs of pitying, verbs of shame & boredom)
 - Verbs of remembering and forgetting sometimes take the genitive case for their object (the thing remembered or forgotten).
 - Examples:
 - Ipse suū meminerat. = “he was mindful of himself (of his own interests).”
 - Verbs of reminding often take an accusative object of the person reminded, and the thing of which that person is being reminded is put in the genitive case.
 - Examples:
 - Catīlina admonēbat alium egestātis, alium cupiditātis. = “Catiline reminded one man of his poverty, [he reminded] another of his greed.”
 - Verbs of pitying (misereor, miserescō, etc.) take a genitive object.
 - Examples:
 - Miserēminī familiae, iūdicēs; miserēminī patris; miserēminī fili. = “Have pity on the family, judges; Have pity on the father; Have pity on the son.”

- Impersonal verbs of feeling (most often feelings of shame, regret, or boredom) often take an accusative object of the person feeling the emotion, and the genitive case is used for the object which causes that feeling.
 - Examples:
 - Mē miseret perietum ipsōrum. = “I pity the walls themselves.”
 - Mē cīvītātis mōrum piget taedetque. = “I am sick and tired of the state and of the customs/traditions.”
- Genitive of the charge
 - Definition: Verbs of accusing, condemning, and acquitting take the genitive case for the charge or penalty which a defendant is facing.
 - Recognition: Legalistic verbs and nouns are the clearest giveaway to be on the lookout for a genitive of the charge.
 - Translation: Use the context to best translate the genitive word into English.
 - Examples:
 - Pecūlātūs damnātus = condemned of/for embezzlement
 - Mē ipse inertiae nequitiaeque condemnō = “I condemn myself of inaction and worthlessness.”

Dative:

- Indirect object
 - Definition: The dative case is used to show the object indirectly affected by the action of a transitive verb.
 - Recognition: Certain verbs (verbs of giving, saying, etc.) usually take both a direct and an indirect object.
 - Translation: For maximum clarity, the English preposition “to” should be used before the indirect object in the dative case, but this is often not used in English.
 - Examples:
 - Eīs hoc dīxit. = “He said this to them.” = “He told them this.”
 - Publius Sextō donum dēdit. = “Publius gave a gift to Sextus.” = Publius gave Sextus a gift.”
- Dative of reference/interest
 - Definition: The dative case is often used to indicate a person or thing to whom some statement refers/concerns, or from whose perspective it is true, or to whom it is of special interest.
 - Translation: Usually, the dative of reference is translated by inserting the English preposition “for,” but translation should follow the context.
 - Examples:
 - Nullus locus est clementiae. = “There is no place for clemency.”
 - Magnum auxilium tibi erat. = “It was a great help for you.” = “It was very helpful to you.”
 - Bella puella Mūsa multīs poētīs persaepe erat. = “A beautiful girl has very often been a Muse (i.e. a source of inspiration) for many poets.”
 - Nūllius culpaē mihi cōnsciū sum. = “In my opinion, I am conscious of no fault.” = “In my own heart, I am conscious of no fault.”
 - Claudia est sapiēns multīs. = “To many people, Claudia is very wise.” = “In many people’s opinion, Claudia is very wise.”

- Dative of purpose

- Definition: The dative case is often used to denote the purpose of a statement.
- Recognition: The dative of purpose is often used in a double dative construction in conjunction with a dative of reference.
- Translation: Supply the English prepositions “as” or “for.” You can often restate the noun in the dative as an infinitive verb.
- Examples:
 - Id mūnerī mīsīt. = “He sent it as a gift.”
 - Auxiliō Nervīis venīrent. = “They came as assistance to/for the Nervīi.” = “They came to help the Nervīi.”
 - Māgnō ūsuī nostrīs fuit. = “It was of great use to our men.” = “It was very useful to our end.”
 - Tertiam aciem nostrīs subsidiō mīsīt. = “He sent the third line as a relief for our men.” = “He sent in the third line to help our men.”

- Dative of possession

- Definition: The dative case is often used to denote possession. Unlike the genitive case, which emphasizes the identity of the possessor, the dative emphasizes the fact of possession.
- Recognition: The dative case is used mainly with intransitive verbs like esse.
- Examples:
 - Est mihi domī pater. = “My father is at home.”
 - Hic liber tibi est. = “This book is yours.” = “This is your book.”

- Dative of agent

- Definition: The dative case is often used to show the agency of a passive verb or participle (i.e. the person who performs the action of a passive verb). It is most commonly used with the passive periphrastic.
- Recognition: The dative of agent is mainly used with participles, and primarily it is pronouns rather than proper names that appear in the dative.
- Translation: Agency is best translated in English through the preposition “by.”
- Examples:
 - Tibi pūgnandum est. = “It must be fought by you.” = “You have to fight.”
 - Id mihi delibēratū et cōstitutū est. = “It has been deliberated and decided by me.” = “I have deliberated and decided.”

- Dative with compound verbs

- Definition: Compound verbs often take a dative rather than an accusative object because the preposition that serves as the prefix of the verb implies an intransitive rather than a transitive translation.
- Recognition: Be prepared for a dative object with any verb that is compounded by a prefix (ad, ante, con, in, inter, ob, post, prae, prō, rē, sub, super, etc.).
- Translation: Translate the dative object according to the meaning of the compound verb and the context of the sentence.
- Examples:
 - Caesārī respondet. = “He responds/repplies to Caesar.”
 - Urbī appropinquābat. = “He was approaching the city.” = “He was coming closer to the city.”
 - Tempestātī obsequī artis est. = “There is an art in following the weather patterns.” = “It is an art to yield to the weather.”

- Dative with intransitive verbs (faveō, placeō, credō, persuadeō, etc.)
 - Definition: Many verbs of favoring, helping, trusting, believing, persuading, obeying, serving, resisting, threatening, pardoning, sparing, and envying take a dative object because these verbs retain an intransitive meaning. (ex: credere = “to believe” = “to put faith in”, placeō = “to please” = “to be pleasing to”, servīre = “to serve” = “to be subservient to”, etc.)
 - Examples:
 - Cūr mihi invidēs? = “Why do you envy me?” = “Why do you look askance at me?”
 - Eī credidī. = “I believed it.” = “I put faith in it.”
 - Caesārī cede! = “Obey Caesar!” = “Yield to Caesar!”
- Dative of separation
 - Definition: Many verbs of taking away (especially taking away from a personal pronoun) take the dative instead of the ablative of separation.
 - Translation: Supply the English prepositions “from” or “away from.”
 - Examples:
 - Id mihi ēripuit. = “He took it from me.” = “He took it away from me.”
- Dative of advantage/disadvantage
 - Definition: This is a specific type of dative of reference in which the word in the dative denotes the person/group/thing for whose benefit or to whose detriment the action of the sentence occurs.
 - Translation: Supply the English prepositions “to” or “for.”
 - Examples:
 - In tantīs reī publicae periculīs = “amidst such dangers to the Republic”
 - Terra nostrīs fortunāta erat. = “The ground was favorable to our men.”
 - Tibi arās. = “You plow for yourself.” = “You grow food for your own benefit.”

Accusative

- Direct object
 - Definition: The accusative case is used to show the object that is directly affected by the action of a transitive verb.
 - Examples:
 - Vir ursum necāvit. = “the man killed the bear.”
 - Ursus virum necāvit. = “The bear killed the man.”
- Object of most prepositions
 - Definition: Most Latin prepositions take an accusative noun as their object.
 - Translation: Translate according to the meaning of the preposition.
 - Examples:
 - in urbem = “into the city”
 - in Gaium Verrem = “against Gaius Verres”
 - ad Caesārem = “to/towards Caesar”
 - sub mare = “under the sea”
- Subject in indirect statement
 - Definition: Verbs of speaking and perceiving often introduce a specific type of dependent clause in Latin. This is called an indirect statement construction. There is not a specific word or words that introduce an indirect statement construction, but the subject and verb of the indirect statement clause appear in a different form to set them apart from the main subject(s) and main verb(s) of the sentence. An indirect statement construction consists of a subject in the accusative case and a verb in the infinitive.

- Recognition: Expect an indirect statement construction after a verb of saying, knowing, thinking, perceiving, etc.
- Translation: Supply the English word “that” after the verb which introduces the indirect statement construction.
- Examples:
 - Sciō tē hoc fēcisse. = “I know that you did this.”
 - Crēdidimus eōs ventūrōs esse. = “We knew that they would come.”
 - Audīvit hoc ā tē factum esse. = “He knew that this was done by you.”

- Accusative of respect/specification/body part

- Definition: The accusative of respect/specification, which is also called the accusative of the body part, is used to show the body part affected by another statement.
- Recognition: It is most often a specific part of the body that is used in this way.
- Translation: Sometimes, either the prepositions “in” or “of” or the phrase “with respect to” can be used to clearly render the meaning of this construction into English. Other times, however, you must use the context of the phrase to determine translation.
- Examples:
 - Ictus genū = “struck in the knee” = “wounded with respect to his knee”
 - Clauda crūre = “lame of leg” = “handicapped with respect to her leg”
 - Caput nectentur = “They will be bound with respect to their head.” = “Their heads will be bound.”

- Accusative of place to which

- Definition: Specific places and geographic locations often appear in the accusative case without preposition ad or in to show the place to/towards which the subject is going.
- Recognition: The accusative of place to which is used exclusively with verbs of motion.
- Translation: Supply the English preposition “to,” “towards,” or “into.”
- Examples:
 - Eō Rōmam. = “I am going to Rome.”
 - Profecti sunt urbem. = “They departed for/to/towards the city”

- Accusative of duration of time

- Definition: The accusative of time when is often used with time words to show the duration of time during which some event took place. This does not say when the event happened, but purely for how long that event happened.
- Recognition: It is always specific time words (second, minute, hour, day, month, year, etc.) that appear in the accusative case to show duration of time.
- Translation: Supply the English preposition “for.”
- Examples:
 - Trēs horās dormīvit. = “He slept for three hours.”
 - Duōs diēs pluit. = “It has been raining for two days.”

- Double accusative

- Definition: Some verbs take a second accusative in addition to their direct object.
- Recognition: Expect this construction after verbs of teaching, after verbs of asking, after verbs of making/changing, and (sometimes) after compound verbs.
- Translation: Verbs of teaching often take a primary and secondary object, which are both in the accusative [“to teach (A) (B)” = “to teach (B) to (A)”]. Similarly, verbs of asking often take two accusative objects [“to ask (A person) (B question)”]. Verbs of making/changing/naming often take a predicate accusative [“to make (A noun) (B adjective)” or “to change (A noun) into (B noun)” or “to name/call (A noun) (B noun)”. Compound verbs sometimes do not resupply the preposition prefixed onto the verb, and there is an accusative direct object of the verb and an accusative object of the preposition attached to the verb as a prefix.

- Examples:
 - Vōs Latīnam doceō. = “I am teaching you all Latin.” = “I am teaching Latin to you all.”
 - Me sententiam rogāvit. = “He asked me my opinion.”
 - Mē augurem nōmināvērunt. = “They named me augur (i.e. priest).”
 - Ūsus Marcum fortiōrem faciēbat. = “Practice was making Marcus stronger.”
 - Caesar Germānōs flūmen trācit. = “Caesar throws the Germans across the river.”

- Accusative of exclamation

- Definition: Nouns often appear (both with and without introductory words) in the accusative case in statements of exclamation.
- Translation: Use context and your best judgment on how to best render an exclamatory statement into idiomatically-sound English.
- Examples:
 - Ō mē infēlicem! = “Oh unfortunate me!”
 - Mē miserum! = “Ah, miserable me!”
 - Prō deum fidem! = “Oh, protection of the gods!” = “Good heavens!”

Ablative

- Object of many prepositions

- Definition: Several prepositions take an ablative, rather than an accusative object.
- Translation: Translate according to the meaning of the preposition.
- Examples:
 - Sallustius dē bellō Catilīnae scrīpsit. = “Sallust wrote about the war of Catiline.”
 - Ex domō iit. = “He went out of the house.”
 - Cicero prō Caeliō orābat. = “Cicero spoke in defense of Caelius Rufus.”

- Ablative of means/instrument

- Definition: The ablative case is used to show the means, tool, or instrument by which the action of the sentence takes place.
- Recognition: The ablative of means is used without a preposition, and the noun in the ablative is always a real, physical object.
- Translation: Supply the English preposition “with.”
- Examples:
 - Litterās stilō scrīpsit. = “He wrote the letters with a pencil/pen/stylus.”
 - Brutus Caesārem siccā pupūgit. = “Brutus stabbed Caesar with a dagger.”
 - Id meīs oculīs vīdī. = “I saw it with my own eyes.”

- Ablative of manner

- Definition: The ablative of manner is used to describe the manner/mode in which the action of the sentence is performed.
- Recognition: The ablative of manner is used both with and without the preposition cum, and the noun in the ablative is often an abstract noun describing a quality rather than an actual physical object.

- Translation: Supply the English preposition “with” or turn the ablative of manner into an equivalent adverb.
- Examples:
 - Magnā vōce exclamāvit. = “He shouted out with a great voice.” = “He shouted very loudly.”
 - Magnō cum celeritāte cucurrit. = “He ran with great speed.” = “He ran very quickly.”
 - Id irā dīxit. = “He said it with anger.” = “He said it angrily.”
- Ablative of accompaniment
 - Definition: The ablative of accompaniment is used to show the person or people with whom the action of the sentence is performed.
 - Recognition: The preposition cum is used before the ablative noun, and the noun is always a person’s name, a personal pronoun, or a group of people.
 - Translation: Translate the preposition cum as “with.”
 - Examples:
 - Sextus ad Fōrum cum suō patre iit. = “Sextus went to the Forum with his father.”
 - Vīnum cum meīs amīcīs bibī. = “I drank wine with my friends.”
- Ablative of agent
 - Definition: The ablative of agent is used to show the person by whom the action of the sentence is performed.
 - Recognition: The ablative of agent only appears with passive verbs. The ablative noun is sometimes preceded by the prepositions ā or ab, but sometimes there is no preposition. The noun in the ablative is always a person, a personal pronoun, or a group of people.
 - Translation: Supply the English preposition “by” if ā or ab is absent.
 - Examples:
 - Caesar ā Brutō necātus est. = “Caesar was killed by Brutus.”
 - Vīr ab ursō necātur. = “The man is being killed by a bear.”
 - Discipulus suō magistrō admonēbātur. = “The student was being warned by his teacher.”
- Ablative of respect/specification
 - Definition: The ablative of respect or specification is used with verbs and adjectives to specify in respect to what a thing is or is done.
 - Recognition: The ablative of respect/specification is always used without a preposition.
 - Translation: The English prepositions “in” or “of” can often be used, but translation should be based on the context and meaning of the phrase.
 - Examples:
 - Virtūte praecēdunt. = “They excel in virtue.” = “They are virtuous.”
 - Claudus ūnō pede. = “lame in one foot” = “crippled with respect to one foot”
 - Corpore senex esse poterit, animō numquam erit. = “He may be an old man in body, [but] he will never be [old] at heart.”
 - Numerō ad duodecim = “close to twelve in number”
 - Maiōrēs nātū = “those older/greater with respect to birth” = “the elders”
 - Supplicio dignī = “[people] deserving of punishment” = “[people] who deserve to be punished”
 - Indigna homine liberō = “unworthy of a free man” = “improper for a free man”

- Ablative of cause

- Definition: The ablative of cause is used to show the causality or reason for a certain action or state of being.
- Recognition: The ablative of cause is used both with and without a preposition. The nouns causā and grātiā regularly appear in the ablative case with a preceding genitive to show causality.
- Translation: Supply the English preposition “by” or phrase “because of.”
- Examples:
 - Suī conservandī causā = “for the sake of saving oneself”
 - Exemplī grātiā = “for the sake of an example”
 - Neglegentiā plectimur. = “We were chastised for negligence” = “We were punished because of our negligence.”
 - Cūrīs aeger. = “disabled because of worries” = “sick with anxiety”
 - Exsultāre laetitiā, triumphāre gaudiō coepit. = “She began to exult in/out of gladness and to triumph in/out of joy.”

- Ablative of time when/within which

- Definition: The ablative case is used to show the time when the action of the sentence is taking place or the time within which the action of the sentence will take place.
- Recognition: The preposition in is often used, but it is not necessary. An ablative of time when can be easily recognized by the appearance of specific time words (minute, hour, day, week, month, year, etc.)
- Translation: Supply the English preposition “in” or “at” for the ablative of time when and the preposition “within” for the ablative of time within which.
- Examples:
 - In annō LXIII = “in the year 63”
 - Eōdem annō = “in the same year”
 - Eā hōrā = “at that hour”
 - Duōbus diēbus advēniēmus. = “We will arrive within two days.”

- Ablative of place where

- Definition: The ablative case is often used to show the place where the action of the sentence takes place.
- Recognition: The prepositions in or sub are often used, but they are not necessary. An ablative of place where can be easily recognized by the appearance of specific place names or geographical features.
- Translation: Supply the English prepositions “in,” “at,” or “under” based on context.
- Examples:
 - In magnā casā vīvit. = “He lives in a large house.”
 - In Rōmā vīvunt. = “They are living in Rome.”
 - Sēde regiā sedēns = “sitting in the royal seat.”
 - Bellum geret Italiā. = “He will wage war in Italy.”

- Ablative of place from which

- Definition: The ablative of place from which shows the origin of a journey or the place from which a person sets out.
- Recognition: The ablative of place from which is often preceded by the prepositions ab, dē, or ex. It can also be used with a verb compounded by these prefixes.
- Translation: Translate according to the preposition, or supply the English prepositions “from,” “out of,” or “away from.”
- Examples:

- Ex Rōmā exīre = “to go away from Rome” = “to leave Rome”
- Brundisiō proficiscor. = “I am departing from Brundisium.” = “I am going away from Brundisium.” = “I am leaving Brundisium.”
- Domō deducta = “[things having been] brought from home.”

- Ablative of separation

- Definition: Verbs of removing, setting free, depriving and wanting take the ablative of separation. Verbs compounded with ā, ab, dē, or ex often are used quite literally to denote separation. Adjectives denoting freedom and want are often followed by an ablative of separation.
- Recognition: These verbal and adjectival constructions sometimes do and sometimes do not take a preposition, but the ablative of separation can be recognized easily based on context and the types of words and phrases that normally employ it.
- Translation: Supply the English preposition “from” or “away from” if necessary.
- Examples:
 - Omni Galliā Rōmānīs interdicit. = “He bars the romans from the whole of Gaul.”
 - Soluti ā cupiditātibus. = “freed from desires”
 - Cōnātū dēsistere = “to desist from the attempt” = “to stop trying”
 - Abstinēre iniuriā = “to refrain from wrong”
 - Ab iūre abīre = “to go outside of the law” = “to break the law”
 - Urbs nūda praesidiō = “a city naked of defense” = “an undefended city”
 - Immūnis militiā = “immunity from military service” = “free of military service”
 - Ā culpā vacuus = “free from blame” = “blameless”

- Ablative of accordance

- Definition: The ablative case can be used to show the law, tradition, or plan according to which someone acts or judges.
- Recognition: The ablative of accordance can be easily recognized by the appearance of words like mōre/mōribus, lēge, cōnsuetūdine, iudiciō, sententiā, iussū, etc. that show laws, traditions, judgments, and orders. This ablative use never takes a preposition.
- Translation: Supply the English phrase “according to” or “in accordance with.”
- Examples:
 - Cōnsuetūdine suā Caesar VI legiōnēs expeditās dūcēbat. = “According to his usual custom, Caesar kept six legions in fighting order as he marched.”
 - Tuō consiliō faciam. = “I will act according to your plan.”
 - Lēge Iuliō = “in accordance with the Julian law”

- Ablative of parentage/origin

- Definition: The ablative case can be used with or without a preposition to show a person’s parentage, origin, or social status.
- Translation: Supply the English preposition “from” or “of.”
- Examples:
 - Amplissimō gēnere nātus = “born of/from a very noble stock/line”
 - summō locō vir. = “a man of high status/rank”
 - Belgās esse ortōs ā Germanīs. = “[he learned that] the Belgians were descended from the Germans.”

- Ablative of attendant circumstances

- Definition: A noun plus a modifying adjective in the ablative case can be used without a preposition to express the circumstances under which the action of a situation takes place. The ablative of attendant circumstances does not describe the actual time when an action takes place, but rather the circumstances in which the event occurred.

- Translation: Like the ablative absolute, an ablative of attendant circumstances functions almost independently from the syntax of the sentence and can be translated in a number of ways and make sense at almost any point in an English sentence. Translation must follow the context and meaning of the sentence.
- Examples:
 - Aestū magnō = “in a great heat” = “on a hot day”
 - Frequentissimō Senātū = “in a very crowded Senate” = “with the Senate house being especially crowded”
 - Caesāre dūce, exercitus vīcit. = “With Caesar as its commander, the army was victorious.” = “The army was victorious because Caesar was in command.”
 - Marcō Tullīō Cicerōne Antōniōque Hybridā consulibus = “with Marcus Tullius Cicero and Antonius Hybrida as consuls” = “In the year when Cicero and Hybrida were consuls” = “In 63 BCE”

- Ablative of comparison

- Definition: Instead of the standard comparative adjective or adverb followed by quam, a noun in the ablative case is often used after a word in the comparative degree to show comparison between the two nouns.
- Translation: Supply the English word “than” after the comparative adjective/adverb.
- Examples:
 - Tua consilia nobis clariōra lūce sunt. = “Your plans are clearer than light to us.”
 - Nemō est eloquentior Cicerōne est. = “No one is more eloquent than Cicero.”
 - Celerius opīniōne = “faster than the common opinion” = “faster than one might think”

- Ablative of degree of difference

- Definition: An adjective in the ablative is commonly used with comparative adjectives and adverbs to show the degree to which the two things being compared differ with respect to the quality being compared.
- Recognition: The ablative adjective is most often paulō, paucō, or multō, but sometimes cardinal numbers are used.
- Translation: Supply the English preposition “by.”
- Examples:
 - Sextus paulō altior quam Marcus est, sed Marcus multō altior quam Aurelia est. = “Sextus is a little taller (i.e. taller by a little) than Marcus, but Marcus is much taller (i.e. taller by a lot) than Aurelia.”
 - Paucīs ante diēbus = “a few days beforehand” = “before by a few days”

- Ablative of the route/way by which

- Definition: The ablative case can also be used to show the route or the way by which a person gets from one place to another.
- Recognition: The ablative of the route does not take a preposition, and can be easily recognized by geographical terminology.
- Translation: Supply the English preposition “by” or “along.”
- Examples:
 - Aurēliā viā profectus est. = “He set out by/along the Aurelian Road.”
 - Terrā Macedoniam petit. = “He travelled to Macedonia by land.”

- Ablative of quality
 - Definition: Like the genitive, the ablative case can also be used to show the quality of a person, place, or thing.
 - Translation: Either supply the English preposition “of” or turn the noun into an adjective.
 - Examples:
 - Mulierem eximiā pulchritūdine = “a woman of rare beauty” = “an exceptionally beautiful woman”
 - Aristotelēs, vir summō intenīō, scientiā, cōpiā = “Aristotle, a man of the greatest genius, learning, and quantity of work”
- Ablative of price/value
 - Definition: Like the genitive, the ablative case can also be used to show the price or value of a thing.
 - Recognition: This construction is used without a preposition and can be easily recognized by the presence of qualitative adjectives, money words, and cardinal numerals.
 - Translation: Supply the English preposition “of,” “for,” or “at.”
 - Examples:
 - Argrum vēdidit sēstertium sex mīlibus. = “He sold the land for 6,000 sesterces.”
 - Dēnāriūs III aestimāvit. = “He valued it at three denarii.”
 - Parvō pretiō redēpta = “bought at/for a low price”
- Ablative object with certain verbs
 - Definition: Several deponent verbs (and any compound forms of those verbs) take an ablative rather than an accusative object.
 - Recognition: These verbs are ūtor, fruor, fungor, potior, and vescor.
 - Translation: Translate the ablative object like an accusative direct object or according to the meaning and context of the verb.
 - Examples:
 - Fruī vitā = “to enjoy life” = “to be pleased by life”
 - Tōtūs Galliae imperiō potīrī = “to gain control of all of Gaul”
 - Gladiō arte ūtī possum. = “I am able to use a sword skillfully.”

Vocative

- Direct address
 - Definition: The vocative case is used to denote the addressee of either a second person verb or an imperative verb of commanding.
 - Recognition: The vocative addressee of a sentence is usually set off from the rest of the sentence by commas, and the interjection Ō often precedes the vocative noun.
 - Examples:
 - Quō usque abūtēre, Catilīna, patientiā nostrā? = “For how long will you abuse our patience, O Catiline?”
 - Magna grātia tibi, ō Iuppiter Stator, agenda sunt. = “Great thanks should be given to you, O Jupiter Stator.”
 - Currēte, Romānī! = “Flee, Romans!”

Locative

- Place where

- Definition: The locative case is used to show the place where the action of the sentence occurs.
- Recognition: Although the locative is its own case, it does not have any distinctive or unique case endings. In the first and second declensions, the locative case looks exactly like the genitive case. In the third, fourth, and fifth declensions, the locative case looks exactly like the ablative case. The locative is easily recognizable by the appearance of names of specific geographical terms.
- Translation: Supply the English preposition “at” or “in.”
- Examples:
 - vīvō Rōmae. = “I live in Rome.”
 - Domī meae accidit. = “It happened at my house.”
 - Rōmae cōsulēs, Carthāgine quotannīs bīnī rēgēs creābantur. = “At Rome, two consuls were elected annually. In Carthage, two kings were elected annually.”
 - Cypri vīsum = “seen at/on Cyprus”

Independent Subjunctive Uses

- Deliberative Subjunctive

- Definition: The subjunctive mood is often used in interrogative sentences.
- Recognition: A deliberative subjunctive is easily recognizable by an interrogative word (who, what, where, when, why, how, etc.) at the beginning and/or a question mark at the end of an interrogative sentence with a subjunctive main verb.
- Translation: Translate a deliberative subjunctive the same as if it were indicative.
- Examples:
 - Quid agam, iūdicēs? Quō mē vertam?
 - “What am I to do, judges? Whither should I turn?”

- Jussive/Hortatory Subjunctives

- Definition: A jussive (from iubeō, iubēre, iussī, iussum – “to order, command”) or hortatory (from hortor, hortārī, hortātus sum – “to urge, encourage”) subjunctive is an independent clause that expresses a command or exhortation.
- Recognition: A jussive subjunctive clause is easily recognized by the fact that the main verb of the sentence is in the subjunctive mood.
- Translation: You should supply “may,” “let,” or “should” before the verb to get the sense of commanding or exhortation when translating a jussive subjunctive.
- Examples:
 - Ita scribatur. Ita faciātur.
 - “So let it be written. So let it be done.”
 - Discipulus discat aut discēdat.
 - “Let the student either learn or leave.”
 - “A student should either learn or leave.”
 - “A student may either learn or leave.”
 - Nē id faciēmus.
 - “Let us not do this.”
 - “We should not do this.”

- Optative Subjunctives

- Definition: An optative clause is an independent subjunctive clause that expresses wish, desire, or hope.
- Recognition: Independent optative clauses are easily recognizable by the introductory conjunction utinam.
- Translation: An optative clause introduced by utinam can be translated as “I wish that...,” “I hope that...,” or “would that...”
- Examples:
 - Utinam sint beātī.
 - “Would that they may be happy.”
 - “I hope/wish that they might be happy.”
 - Utinam perieris.
 - “Would that you might die.”
 - “I wish that you might die.”
 - Utinam nē vērē scriberem.
 - “I wish that I were not writing the truth.”

- Potential Subjunctive

- Definition: The subjunctive mood is often used in independent clauses to show that the action is merely conceived or possible rather than desirable (like with the hortatory subjunctive) or real (like with the indicative mood).
- Recognition: A potential subjunctive clause is recognized by the fact that the main verb of the sentence is in the subjunctive mood.
- Translation: There is no single English equivalent for the potential subjunctive. The mood must be rendered according to the context, using the auxiliary words “would/should/may/might/can/could.”
- Examples:
 - Crēdās nōn dē puerō sed ā puerō.
 - “You might/would think that it was not written about a boy, but by a boy.”
 - Aliquis dicat.
 - “Someone might say.”

Dependent/Subordinate Subjunctive Uses:

- Conditionals

- Definition: A conditional is a basic type of complex sentence that consists of two clauses. The first of these clauses (the protasis – “premise”) is a subordinate clause that states a hypothetical action or circumstance. The second of these clauses is the main clause (apodosis – “conclusion”), which expresses the anticipated outcome if the premise turns out to be true.
- Recognition: The two clauses of a conditional are easily recognizable by the words used to introduce them. The protasis is usually introduced by sī (“if”) or nisi (“if not,” “unless”), and the apodosis is sometimes introduced by tum (“then”).
- Translation: A conditional can be translated as “if [protasis], then [apodosis]” or “if not/unless [protasis], then [apodosis]”
- Note: there are six formal types of conditionals with specific tenses and moods of verbs in each clause and specific translations, but most conditionals in Latin are actually mixed conditionals and should be translated according to their context.
- Examples:
 - Sī hoc dīcet, [tum] errābit.
 - “If he says this, [then] he will be wrong.”
 - Nisi veniet, hoc nōn vidēbit.
 - “Unless he comes, he will not see this.”
 - “If he does not come, he will not see this.”

- Cum Clauses

- Definition: A “cum clause” is a subordinate clause introduced by the Latin conjunction cum.
- Recognition: Cum clauses can come before or after any kind of indicative main clause. They are immediately recognizable by the use of the conjunction cum.
- There are three kinds of subjunctive cum clauses (as well as one type of indicative cum clause).
 - Cum temporal clauses
 - A cum temporal clause has an indicative verb, and it is used to show the time of a simple and real action in the main clause.
 - Translation: The cum in a cum temporal clause is translated as “when”
 - Example:
 - Cum pugna finita sit, dūx Rōmam redit.
 - “When the battle was over, the general returned to Rome.”
 - Cum circumstantial clauses
 - A cum circumstantial clause has a subjunctive verb, and it is used to show the time or circumstances of a complex or possible action in the main clause.

- Translation: The cum in a cum temporal clause is translated as “when” or “whenever”
 - Example:
 - Cum Rōmam eam, mihi īre ad balneās Caracallae placet.
 - “Whenever I go to Rome, I like to go to the Baths of Caracalla.”
 - Cum causal clauses
 - A cum temporal clause has a subjunctive verb, and it is used to show the reason for an action in the main clause.
 - Translation: The cum in a cum causal clause is translated as “since” or “because”
 - Example:
 - Marcus ad tepidārium redit, cum caldārium nimium calidum esset.
 - “Marcus returned to the warm pool, since the hot pool was too hot.”
 - Cum concessive clauses
 - A cum concessive clause has a subjunctive verb, and it is used to show the contrast between the two clauses of the sentence.
 - Translation: The cum in a cum causal clause is translated as “although”
 - Recognition: A concessive cum clause is usually recognizable by the presence of the conjunction tamen (“nevertheless”) in the main clause
 - Examples:
 - Cicero, cum in oppido parvo natus esset, Romae tamen vivebat.
 - “Cicero, although he was born in a small town, nevertheless lived in Rome.”
 - Cum copiae hostium essent maiores, Romani tamen eas vicerunt.
 - “Although the forces of the enemy were greater, the Romans nevertheless overcame them.”
- Fear Clauses
- Definition: A fear clause is a kind of subordinate clause that shows fear or apprehension.
 - Recognition: Fear clauses are easily recognized by the fact that they follow a verb of fearing and are always introduced by the conjunction nē or ut.
 - Translation: The conjunctions used in a fear clause are exactly the opposite of what we might expect from a purpose or result clause. Nē introduces a positive fear clause (Timeō nē... = “I fear that...”), while ut or (very seldom) nē nōn introduces a negative fear clause (Vereor ut... = “I fear that ... not”). The origin of this inversion of conjunction is that they essentially introduce independent jussive clauses (Timeō nē abeās. = “I fear that you may go away.” Timeō. Nē abeās! = “I am afraid. Don’t go away!”)
 - Examples:
 - Timeō nē id crēdant.
 - “I fear that they will (may) believe this.”
 - Metuistī ut mulierēs ex casā exissent.
 - “You were afraid that the women had not left the house.”
- Indirect Commands / Jussive Noun Clauses / Substantive Clauses of Purpose
- Definition: An indirect command is a kind of subordinate clause that shows the purpose of some command given in the main clause.
 - Recognition: The main clause always contains a verb of commanding, urging, or asking (hortor, imperō, invitō, obsecrō, orō, rogō, moneō, persuādeō, praecipō, etc.). The subordinate clause always contains a subjunctive verb and is always introduced by ut or nē.
 - Translation: The ut in a positive indirect command is translated as “in order that,” while the nē in a negative result clause is translated as “in order that not.” An indirect command is often best translated into English, however, by the use of an infinitive clause (“to _____” for positive indirect commands and “not to _____” for negative indirect commands).

- Examples:
 - Dūx militēs imperat ut hostēs pugnet.
 - “The general orders his soldiers in order that they fight the enemies.”
 - “The general orders his soldiers to fight the enemies.”
 - Servus dominus orābat ut suae vitae parceret.
 - “The slave was begging his master in order that his master spare his life.”
 - “The slave was begging his master to spare his life.”
 - Monuit eos nē hoc facerent.
 - “He warned them in order that they not do this.”
 - “He warned them not to do this.”
- Indirect Questions
 - Definition: An indirect question is a subordinate clause in a statement of fact that has a question implied within it.
 - Recognition: an indirect question often follows verbs of perception, especially verbs of asking and saying. It is always introduced by an interrogative adjective, adverb, or pronoun, and it always contains a subjunctive verb.
 - Translation: An indirect question can be translated quite literally, using whatever interrogative word is in the sentence.
 - Example:
 - Marcus suum patrem rogavit cur caelum caeruleum esset.
 - “Marcus asked his father why the sky was blue.”
 - (restated as a direct question) “Marcus asked his father, ‘Why is the sky blue?’”
 - Sextus Cornēliam narrat quam crudelis magister suus sit.
 - “Sextus tells Cornelia how cruel his teacher is.”
- Proviso Clauses
 - Definition: A proviso clause is a kind of subordinate clause which express a provisional circumstance under which the actions of the main clause can or do take place.
 - Recognition: A proviso clause is almost always introduced by dummodo or dummodo nē is used in negative proviso clauses.
 - Translation: The dummodo in a proviso clause can be translated as “provided that,” “so long as,” or “if and only if.”
 - Examples:
 - Nōn timēbō, dummodo hīc remaneās.
 - “I will not be afraid, provided that you remain here.”
 - “I will not be afraid, so long as you remain here.”
 - “I will not be afraid, if and only if you remain here.”
 - Erimus fēlicēs, dummodo nē discēdās.
 - “We will be happy, so long as you do not leave.”
 - “We will be happy, provided that you do not leave.”
 - “We will be happy, if and only if you do not leave.”
- Purpose Clauses
 - Definition: A purpose clause is a kind of subordinate clause that shows the purpose of an action in the main clause.
 - Recognition: The subordinate clause always contains a subjunctive verb and is always introduced by ut or nē.
 - Translation: The ut in a positive indirect command is translated as “in order that,” while the nē in a negative result clause is translated as “in order that not” or (if you want to go old school) “lest.” A purpose clause is sometimes best translated into English, however, by the use of an infinitive clause (“to _____” for positive indirect commands and “not to _____” for negative indirect commands).

- Examples:
 - Hoc dicit ut eōs iuvet.
 - “He says this in order to help them.”
 - “He says this to help them.”
 - Cum cūrā docet ut discipulī bene discant.
 - “He teaches with care in order that his students may learn well.”
 - “He teaches with care so (that) his students may learn well.”
 - Hoc facit nē capiātur.
 - “He does this in order that he not be captured.”
 - “He does this in order not to be captured.”
 - “He does this lest he be captured.”
- Relative Clauses of Characteristic
 - Definition: a relative clause of characteristic is a type of relative clause that contains a subjunctive verb and does not refer to a specific person or thing, but to a general type of person or thing.
 - Recognition: A relative clause of characteristic can be identified by a relative pronoun at the beginning of the clause and a subjunctive verb at the end.
 - Translation: You can translate a relative clause of characteristic just like a relative clause (“who,” “that,” “which”) or you can include the broader generalization “of the type who...” or “of the type which...”
 - Examples:
 - Hic est discipulus quī Latīnam amet.
 - “This is a student who loves Latin.”
 - “This is the kind/sort/type of student who loves Latin.”
 - Ille est liber quem omnēs legant.
 - “That is a book which everyone reads.”
 - “That is the kind of book that anyone would read.”
- Result Clauses
 - Definition: A result clause is a kind of subordinate clause that shows the result of the main, indicative clause.
 - Recognition: The main clause in a sentence with a result clause always has a word such as adeō, ita, sic, tālis, tam, tantus, tantum, or tot. The subordinate clause always contains a subjunctive verb and is always introduced by ut or ut nōn.
 - Translation: The ut in a positive result clause is translated as “that,” while the ut nōn in a negative result clause is translated as “that not.”
 - Example:
 - Adeō perturbāta era ut vix loquī posset.
 - “She was so confused that she could barely speak.”
 - Tam occupāta est ut mēcum numquam loquātur.
 - “She is so busy that she never speaks with me.”
- Subordinate Clauses in Indirect Statement
 - Within an indirect statement construction, the verbs of subordinate clauses appear in the subjunctive mood, even though they would use the indicative mood in direct discourse.
 - Examples (direct vs. indirect discourse):
 - Lēgit librōs quōs mīserās.
 - “He read the books which you had sent.”
 - Dixit sē lēgisse librōs quōs mīsisēs.
 - “He said that he had read the books which you had sent.”